Acts whose titles are printed in light type are those relating to day-to-day management of agricultural matters, and are generally valid for a limited period.

The titles of all other acts are printed in bold type and preceded by an asterisk.

All amounts in this budget document are expressed in euro unless otherwise indicated.

Any revenue provided for in Article 21(2) and (3) of the Financial Regulation, entered in Titles 5 and 6 of the statement of revenue, may lead to additional appropriations being entered on the headings which bore the initial expenditure giving rise to the corresponding revenue.

Figures for outturn refer to all authorised appropriations, including budget appropriations, additional appropriations and earmarked revenue.

Budgetary remarks are only executable insofar as they do not modify or extend the scope of an existing legal base, impinge on the administrative autonomy of institutions and can be covered by available resources (as indicated in the annex to the executability letter dated 28 October 2015).

A. INTRODUCTION AND FINANCING OF THE GENERAL BUDGET

INTRODUCTION

The general budget of the Union is the instrument which sets out and authorises the total amount of revenue and expenditure deemed necessary for the European Union and the European Atomic Energy Community for each year.

The budget is established and implemented in compliance with the principles of unity, budgetary accuracy, annuality, equilibrium, unit of account, universality, specification, sound financial management and transparency.

— The principle of unity and the principle of budgetary accuracy mean that all revenue and expenditure of the Union when it is charged to the budget must be incorporated in a single document.

— The principle of annuality means that the budget is adopted for one budgetary year at a time and that both commitment and payment appropriations for the current budgetary year must, in principle, be used in the course of the year.

— The principle of equilibrium means that forecasts of revenue for the budgetary year must be equal to payment appropriations for that year; borrowing to cover any budget deficit which may arise is not compatible with the own resources system and will not be authorised.

— In accordance with the principle of unit of account, the budget is drawn up and implemented in euros and the accounts shall be presented in euros.

— The principle of universality means that total revenue is to cover total payment appropriations with the exception of a limited number of revenue items which are assigned to particular items of expenditure. Revenue and expenditure are entered in full in the budget without any adjustment against each other.

— The principle of specification means that each appropriation must have a given purpose and be assigned to a specific objective in order to prevent any confusion between appropriations.

— The principle of sound financial management is defined by reference to the principles of economy, efficiency and effectiveness.

— The budget is established in compliance with the principle of transparency, ensuring sound information on the implementation of the budget and the accounts.

The budget presents appropriations and resources by purpose (activity-based budgeting), with a view to enhancing transparency in the management of the budget with reference to the objectives of sound financial management and in particular efficiency and effectiveness.

The expenditure authorised by the present budget totals EUR 165 605 645 322 in commitment appropriations and EUR 148 198 939 744 in payment appropriations, representing a variation rate of + 3,05 % and of + 2,37 % respectively by comparison with the 2018 budget.

Budgetary revenue totals EUR 148 198 939 744. The uniform rate of call for the VAT resource is 0,30 % (except for Germany, Netherlands and Sweden for which the rate of call for the period 2014-2020 has been fixed at 0,15 %) whilst that for the GNI resource is 0,6512 %. Traditional own resources account for 14,49 % of the financing of the budget for 2019. The VAT resource accounts for 11,97 % and the GNI resource for 72,26 %. Other revenue for this financial year is estimated at EUR 1 894 392 136.

The own resources needed to finance the 2019 budget account for 0,89 % of the total GNI.

The tables below set out step by step the method used to calculate the financing of the 2019 budget.

4. Total allocated expenditure		127 599 039 596
5. Enlargement related expenditure (2)		27 076 886 462
6. Enlargement-adjusted total allocated expenditure = (4) – (5)		100 522 153 134
7. United Kingdom's correction original amount = (3) × (6) × 0,66		5 862 761 188
8. United Kingdom's advantage (3)		854 326 562
9. Core United Kingdom's correction = (7) – (8)		5 008 434 626
10. Windfall gains deriving from traditional own resources (4)		– 15 094 049
11. Correction for the United Kingdom = (9) – (10)		5 023 528 676

(1) Rounded percentages.

(2) The amount of enlargement-related expenditure corresponds to total allocated expenditure in 13 Member States (that have acceded to the Union after 30 April 2004), except for agricultural direct payments and market-related expenditure as well as that part of rural development expenditure originating from the EAGGF, Guarantee Section.

(3) The 'UK advantage' corresponds to the effects arising for the United Kingdom from the changeover to capped VAT and the introduction of the GNP/GNI-based own resource.

(4) These windfall gains correspond to the net gains of the United Kingdom resulting from the increase — from 10 to 20 % as of 1 January 2014 — in the percentage of traditional own resources retained by Member States to cover the collection costs of traditional own resources (TOR).

CHAPTER 1 1 — LEVIES AND OTHER DUTIES PROVIDED FOR UNDER THE COMMON ORGANISATION OF THE MARKETS IN SUGAR (POINT (A) OF ARTICLE 2(1) OF DECISION 2014/335/EU, EURATOM)

Financial year 2019	Financial year 2018	Financial year 2017
p.m.	– 92 981 713	20 242,49

Remarks

The common organisation of the market in the sugar sector provided that sugar, isoglucose and inulin syrup producers had to pay basic and B production levies. These levies were intended to cover market support expenditure. At present amounts entered under this article are a consequence of the revision of past established levies. Levies for the marketing year 2007/2008 till the marketing year 2016/2017 are entered under Article 1 1 7 of this chapter as a 'production charge'.

Figures are net of collection costs.

Remarks

The GNI-based resource is an 'additional' resource, providing the revenue required to cover expenditure in excess of the amount yielded by traditional own resources, VAT-based payments and other revenue in any particular year. By implication, the GNI-based resource ensures that the general budget of the Union is always balanced ex ante.

The GNI call rate is determined by the additional revenue needed to finance the budgeted expenditure not covered by the other resources (VAT-based payments, traditional own resources and other revenue). Thus a call rate is applied to the GNI of each of the Member States.

The rate to be applied to the Member States' gross national income for this financial year is 0,6512 %.

A deficit is entered in Article 27 02 01 of the statement of expenditure in Section III 'Commission'.

The Commission shall inform the Member States of the amounts resulting from this calculation before 1 February of the year following that in which the data for the adjustments was supplied.

Financial year 2019	Financial year 2018	Financial year 2017

Remarks

Article 3 of the Protocol on the position of Denmark and Article 5 of the Protocol on the position of the United Kingdom and Ireland, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, grant full exemption to these Member States from supporting the financial consequences of some specific policies in the area of freedom, security and justice, with the exception of the related administrative costs. They can therefore obtain an adjustment to the own resources paid for each year in which they do not participate.

Each Member State's contribution to the adjustment mechanism is calculated by applying to the budget expenditure resulting from this operation or policy the scale of the aggregate gross national income and its components from the preceding year, supplied by the Member States in accordance with Article 2(2) of Council Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 1287/2003 of 15 July 2003 on the harmonisation of gross national income at market prices (OJ L 181, 19.7.2003, p. 1).

The Commission works out each Member State's balance and informs it in time for that Member State to enter its balance in the account referred to in Article 9(1) of Regulation (EU, Euratom) No 609/2014 on the first working day of December, in accordance with Article 11 of that Regulation.

Legal basis

Council Regulation (EU, Euratom) No 609/2014 of 26 May 2014 on the methods and procedure for making available the traditional, VAT and GNI-based own resources and on the measures to meet cash requirements (OJ L 168, 7.6.2014, p. 39), and in particular Article 11 thereof.

CHAPTER 6 1 — REPAYMENT OF MISCELLANEOUS EXPENDITURE (cont'd)

6 1 1 (cont'd)

6 1 1 3 (cont'd)

Remarks

Decision 2003/76/EC stipulates that the Commission is entrusted with winding up the financial operations of the European Coal and Steel Community which are still in progress upon expiry of the ECSC Treaty.

Pursuant to Article 4 of that Decision, net revenue from the investment of available assets will constitute revenue in the general budget of the Union earmarked for a specific purpose, namely financing research projects in sectors related to the coal and steel industry by the Research Fund for Coal and Steel. Unused revenue and appropriations deriving from this revenue still available on 31 December in any given year, as well as amounts recovered, shall be carried over automatically to the following year. Those appropriations may not be transferred to other budget items.

The net revenue available for financing research projects in year n + 2 appears in the balance sheet of the ECSC in liquidation for year n, and after the liquidation process has been completed will appear as assets in the balance sheet of the Coal and Steel Research Fund. This financing mechanism took effect in 2003. Revenue coming from 2017 will be used for research in 2019. In order to reduce as far as possible the fluctuations that movements in the financial markets could cause in the financing of research, a smoothing arrangement is applied. The amount of net revenue expected to be available for research in 2019 is EUR 39 654 000.

In accordance with Article 4 of Decision 2003/76/EC, 72,8 % of the fund's appropriations will be for the steel-related sector and 27,2 % for the coal-related sector.

In accordance with point (b) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation, revenue will be used to provide additional appropriations under Chapter 08 05 of the statement of expenditure in Section III 'Commission'.

Legal basis

Financial year 2019	Financial year 2018	Financial year 2017
p.m.	p.m.	21 587 876,20

Remarks

This article is intended to record capital repayments and interest payments on special loans and risk capital granted from the appropriations in Chapters 22 02 and 22 04 of the statement of expenditure in Section III 'Commission' to Mediterranean third countries.

It also comprises capital repayments and interest payments on special loans and risk capital granted to certain Mediterranean Member States which, however, represent a very small proportion of the overall amount. These loans/risk capital were granted at a time those countries had not yet joined the Union.

The revenue obtained normally exceeds the amounts forecast in the budget because of the interest payments on special loans which may still be disbursed during the preceding financial year as well as during the current financial year. The interest on special loans and risk capital is charged from the moment the loans are disbursed; interest on special loans is paid in six-monthly instalments and interest on risk capital generally in annual instalments.

This article may accommodate, in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation, assigned revenue which is used to provide additional appropriations to finance expenditure to which this revenue is assigned.

p.m.	p.m.	38 820 698,30

Remarks

Decision 2003/76/EC stipulates that the Commission is entrusted with winding up the financial operations of the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) which are still in progress upon expiry of the ECSC Treaty.

Pursuant to Article 4 of that Decision, net revenue from the investment of available assets will constitute revenue in the general budget of the Union earmarked for a specific purpose, namely financing research projects in sectors related to the coal and steel industry by the Research Fund for Coal and Steel. Unused revenue and appropriations deriving from this revenue still available on 31 December in any given year, as well as amounts recovered, shall be carried over automatically to the following year. Those appropriations may not be transferred to other budget items.

The net revenue available for financing research projects in year n + 2 appears in the balance sheet of the ECSC in liquidation for year n, and after the liquidation process has been completed will appear as assets in the balance sheet of the Coal and Steel Research Fund. This financing mechanism took effect in 2003. Revenue coming from 2017 will be used for research in 2019. In order to reduce as far as possible the fluctuations that movements in the financial markets could cause in the financing of research, a smoothing arrangement is applied. The amount of net revenue expected to be available for research in 2019 is EUR 39 654 000.

In accordance with Article 4 of Decision 2003/76/EC, 72,8 % of the fund's appropriations will be for the steel-related sector and 27,2 % for the coal-related sector.

In accordance with point (b) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation, revenue will be used to provide additional appropriations under Chapter 08 05 of the statement of expenditure in this section.

CHAPTER 8 1 — LOANS GRANTED BY THE COMMISSION

8 1 0 Capital repayments and interest in respect of special loans and risk capital granted in the framework of financial cooperation with Mediterranean third countries

Financial year 2019	Financial year 2018	Financial year 2017
p.m.	p.m.	21 587 876,20

Remarks

This article is intended to record capital repayments and interest payments on special loans and risk capital granted from the appropriations in Chapters 22 02 and 22 04 of the statement of expenditure in this section to Mediterranean third countries.

It also comprises capital repayments and interest payments on special loans and risk capital granted to certain Mediterranean Member States which, however, represent a very small proportion of the overall amount. These loans/risk capital were granted at a time the countries had not yet joined the Union.

The revenue obtained normally exceeds the amounts forecast in the budget because of the interest payments on special loans which may still be disbursed during the preceding financial year as well as during the current financial year. The interest on special loans and risk capital is charged from the moment the loans are disbursed; interest on special loans is paid in six-monthly instalments and interest on risk capital generally in annual instalments.

This article may accommodate, in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation, assigned revenue which is used to provide additional appropriations to finance expenditure to which this revenue is assigned.

This measure is designed to be an effective channel of communication and dialogue between the citizens of the Union and the Union institutions, and to take account of specific national and regional characteristics, where appropriate in cooperation with the Member State authorities. Emphasis will also be placed on preparing citizens for the introduction of the euro in Member States planning for its introduction.

It includes:

— the development of communication activities at central level (brochures, leaflets, newsletters, website design, development and maintenance, social media, exhibitions, stands, conferences, seminars, audiovisual products, opinion polls, surveys, studies, promotional material, coin design competitions, twinning programmes, training etc.), and similar activities at the national and regional level implemented in cooperation with the Commission's Representations,

— partnership agreements with Member States that wish to provide information about the euro or the EMU,

— cooperation and networking with Member States in the appropriate forums, — communication initiatives in third countries, in particular to point out the international role of the euro and the value of financial integration.

The Commission, when implementing this article, should take duly into account the outcomes of the meetings of the Interinstitutional Group on Information (IGI).

The implementation of the Commission's communication strategy takes place in close coordination with the Member States and the European Parliament.

The Commission adopts a strategy and an annual work plan drawing on the orientations set out in its Communication of 11 August 2004 (COM(2004) 552 final) and it reports regularly to the relevant committee of the European Parliament on the implementation of the programme and on planning for the coming year.

This appropriation is also intended to cover or to temporarily pre-finance costs incurred by the Union in concluding and carrying out operations linked with the borrowing and lending operations for macro-financial assistance, Euratom, balance of payment and European financial stabilisation mechanism.

Any revenue entered in Article 5 5 1 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with point (a) of Article 21(3) of the Financial Regulation.

Remarks

Macro-financial assistance ('MFA') is a form of financial aid extended by the Union to partner countries experiencing a balance of payments crisis. MFA is designed for countries geographically, economically and politically close to the Union. These include candidate and potential candidate countries, countries covered by the European Neighbourhood Policy and, in certain circumstances, other third countries. In principle, MFA is only available to countries benefiting from an International Monetary Fund programme.

MFA is exceptional in nature and is mobilised on a case-by-case basis to help countries dealing with serious balance-of-payments difficulties. Its objective is to restore a sustainable external financial situation, while encouraging economic adjustments and structural reforms.

While MFA can take the form of medium/long-term loans or grants, or a combination of these, this article only covers the grant element of MFA operations.

Appropriations under this article will also be used to cover costs incurred in relation to MFA operations, and in particular: (i) costs incurred to conduct operational assessments in the beneficiary countries to obtain reasonable assurances on the functioning of administrative procedures and financial circuits, (ii) costs related to the implementation of the 'Better Regulation' guidelines, in particular for ex-post evaluations of MFA operations, and (iii) costs to cover comitology requirements.

The Commission will inform the budgetary authority regularly of the macro-financial situation of the beneficiary countries and will report extensively on the implementation of MFA on a yearly basis.

Any revenue entered in Article 5 5 1 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with point (a) of Article 21(3) of the Financial Regulation.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover payments in respect of commitments remaining to be settled from previous years.

Even though the end of the commitment period has been reached, the facilities have to be operated for several years during which time payments will be needed for investments and in order to honour guarantee obligations. Therefore reporting and monitoring requirements will continue until the end of the facility periods.

In order to honour its obligations, the Commission may draw on its cash resources to service the debt provisionally. In this case, Article 12 of Council Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 1150/2000 of 22 May 2000 implementing Decision 2007/436/EC, Euratom on the system of the European Communities own resources (OJ L 130, 31.5.2000, p. 1) applies.

The contributions from the EFTA States pursuant to the Agreement on the European Economic Area, and in particular Article 82 thereof and Protocol 32 thereto, must be added to the appropriations entered in this article. By way of information, these amounts derive from contributions from the EFTA States entered against Article 6 3 0 of the statement of revenue, which constitute assigned revenue in accordance with points (e), (f) and (g) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation; they give rise to the provision of corresponding appropriations and to implementation under the 'European Economic Area' Annex to this part of the statement of expenditure in this section, which forms an integral part of the general budget of the Union.

Any revenue from the contributions from candidate countries and, if applicable, the Western Balkan potential candidates, for participating in Union programmes and entered in Item 6 0 3 1 of the statement of revenue, may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with points (e), (f) and (g) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation.

Any revenues and repayments generated on Trust Accounts entered in Article 5 2 3 of the statement of revenue will be returned to the general budget of the Union or transferred to the succeeding financial instruments under the Union equity instruments for research and innovation under Horizon 2020 or the Equity Facility for Growth under COSME, as the case may be, in accordance with the Financial Regulation and Regulations (EU) No 1287/2013 and (EU) No 1290/2013.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to strengthen the competitiveness of enterprises, in particular that of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), and to encourage entrepreneurship and foster the creation and growth of SMEs.

The implemented measures will include:

— networks bringing together a variety of stakeholders,

— market replication projects,

— policy analyses, development and coordination with participating countries,

— policies to foster entrepreneurship,

— information sharing, dissemination, awareness raising and advisory services to increase SME's competitiveness and help them participate in the single market and beyond,

— support to joint actions of Member States or regions, as well as other measures under the COSME programme.

The Union will provide support to activities such as the Enterprise Europe Network and entrepreneurship promotion. It will also support projects concerned with the first applications or market replication of techniques, practices or products (e.g. new business concepts for consumer goods) of Union relevance that have already been technically demonstrated with success but, owing to residual risk, have not yet significantly penetrated the market. Those projects will be designed to promote wider use within the participating countries and facilitate market uptake.

Projects will also seek to improve the framework conditions including through capacity building in clusters and other business networks notably with regard to support SME internationalisation in order to ensure that Union enterprises are competitive and sustainable, including in the tourism sector, by supporting coherence and consistency in implementation, as well as informed policy-making at Union level. In addition, projects will be put in place to support the implementation of the Single Market Strategy and the Start-up Initiative. Support actions, directly linked to the achievement of these objectives are also considered for funding: meetings (including workshops), studies, information and publications and participation in study groups.

In relation to gender equality, projects to promote the position of female entrepreneurs will receive particular attention in order to help overcome gender-based hurdles women may face and to attain an equal representation of male and female entrepreneurs throughout the Union.

Sustainable tourism activities will receive a special focus with initial priority given to soft mobility, cycling networks, eco-tourism and nature protection. Accessibility for all, particularly for people with reduced mobility and for socially disadvantaged people is also of high importance in this context.

The Union will coordinate, promote and support actions for sustainable tourism, such as:

— preservation of long-term sustainable tourism resources through protection of natural, cultural, historical and industrial heritage,

— coordination and support for access to sustainable tourism information and services for less-advantaged citizens living in poverty, as well as for persons with reduced mobility,

— cross-border coordination of European cycling networks, together with rail and long-distance bus information and services.

The 'Erasmus for Young Entrepreneurs' programme aims to encourage European entrepreneurship, the sharing of knowledge and best practices, and the creation of valuable networks, partnerships, companies and jobs.

Due to the currently difficult economic situation it is indispensable to support European enterprises, in particular young innovative start-ups and female entrepreneurs, and to foster entrepreneurship by assigning enough funds to programmes like the programme for the competitiveness of enterprises and small and medium-sized enterprises (COSME). It is particularly important to provide support and incentives for the most modern and innovative sectors, such as the sharing economy and the digital economy. The Union needs to provide support for young entrepreneurs in these sectors and to develop and introduce instruments that will allow innovative start-ups to compete with rivals from third countries on world markets.

In particular the programme 'Erasmus for Young Entrepreneurs' has been very successful, efficient and effective in contributing successfully to fighting unemployment and supporting robust start-ups across Europe. With regard to under-representation of women among entrepreneurs, attention is paid to involving young female entrepreneurs in the programme in order to encourage them to pursue their entrepreneurial career and to gain experience in how to overcome gender-specific hurdles they may face.

The financial means for the 'Erasmus for Young Entrepreneurs' programme should be maintained in particular due to the following reasons:

— the programme helps fostering European entrepreneurship, the sharing of knowledge and best-practices as well as the creation of valuable networks and partnerships,

— the programme is very successful and has shown an increasing number of participants over the last years which is expected to increase further,

— the programme effectively tackles the problem of unemployment as it helps people without work to become self-employed and existing SME to create jobs and increase their turnover by expanding and/or internationalising their business,

— the number of applications exceeds by far the possibilities the Commission can fulfil with the financial means currently available.

The contributions from the EFTA States pursuant to the Agreement on the European Economic Area, and in particular Article 82 thereof and Protocol 32 thereto, must be added to the appropriations entered in this article. By way of information, those amounts derive from contributions from the EFTA States entered against Article 6 3 0 of the statement of revenue, which constitute assigned revenue in accordance with points (b) (e) and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation; they give rise to the provision of corresponding appropriations and to implementation under the 'European Economic Area' Annex to this part of the statement of expenditure in this section, which forms an integral part of the general budget.

This appropriation is to be used to improve access to finance SMEs, including companies of female entrepreneurs, in the form of equity and debt, in their start-up, growth and transfer phase.

A loan guarantee facility (LGF) shall provide counter-guarantees, direct guarantees and other risk sharing arrangements for debt financing which shall reduce the particular difficulties that viable SMEs face in accessing finance either due to their perceived higher risk or their lack of sufficient available collateral and for securitisation of SME debt finance portfolios.

An equity facility for growth (EFG) shall allow investments in risk capital funds which invest in SMEs in the expansion and growth stage, whilst taking a gender-sensitive and non-discriminatory approach, and in particular in those operating cross-borders. The possibility shall exist to invest in early stage funds in conjunction with the equity facility for RDI under Horizon 2020. In cases of joint investments in multi-stage funds, investments will be provided on a pro-rata basis from the EFG of COSME and the equity facility for RDI under Horizon 2020. Support from the EFG shall be (a) either directly by the European Investment Fund (EIF) or other entities entrusted with the implementation on behalf of the Commission or (b) by funds-of-funds or investment vehicles investing across borders.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

Tourism is Europe's third-largest industry. The Union travel and tourism sector employs almost 25 million people (directly and indirectly) and visitors generate EUR 351 billion per year. The tourism industry generates 9,7 % of total EU-28 GDP, a figure which is forecast to rise to 10,4 % by 2025.

Last year more than 455 million tourists came to the Union. Tourism is part of daily life; it is part and parcel of European values. In view of recent crises, and at a time when there is an increasing threat of global terrorism, there is a greater need for tourism, which is an industry that promotes peace.

For the sustainable development and protection of this highly economically important sector, closer co-operation is required between the European Institutions and Member State governments, as well as maximum citizen involvement.

There are already two programmes, namely the European Capital of Culture and the European Capital of Sport. The evaluations made of the European Capital of Culture programme, as well as public consultation on its future after 2019, have revealed that it has become one of the most ambitious cultural initiatives in Europe and one of the most appreciated by European citizens. That programme has generated economic growth in the majority of the cities involved. In 2013 in Marseille (France) there were close to 11 million tourists, while Pécs (Hungary) recorded a 27 % increase in hotel room occupancy. Above all, the programme has created communities and the majority of the cities involved have found a new basis for their development plans. This has also created growth in the regions in which the cities are located.

It is crucial to uphold those values and disseminate them as widely as possible. A 'European Capital of Tourism' could be an excellent vehicle for that. Such a programme would aim to promote the rich tourism offering of European countries; increase a sentiment of shared local tourism-related values; strengthen tourism-generated development in cities, their surroundings and their regions; enhance the image of cities that are awarded this title and ultimately raise the profile of their regions.

It would also be important for cities holding the title to seek to promote social inclusion and equal opportunities and to do their utmost to ensure the broadest possible involvement of all the components of civil society in the preparation and implementation of tourism-related programmes, with special attention being paid to young people and marginalised and disadvantaged groups.

The award of the title should be based on a specially created tourism-related programme, which should have a strong European dimension. That tourism development programme should be part of a long-term strategy having a sustainable impact on local economic, cultural and social development.

Because of the strong regional dimension of tourism, it is crucial, alongside the title 'European Capital of Tourism', for it to be possible to give awards to cities and regions that have reached unique, innovation based results in the tourism sector.

Accordingly, a 'European Tourism Award' could be given by an independent board of experts in different categories (for example: sustainable tourism, digital tourism, health tourism) established by the European Parliament, the Commission and the Committee of Regions. In this process the network of tourism stakeholders which created the Tourism Manifesto for Growth and Jobs, with the support of civil society organisations, could be an excellent partner.

The general aim of the preparatory action is to:

— give local tourism its own profile, and strengthen links between cities and their regions;

— establish the 'European Capital of Tourism' within the existing institutional framework alongside the Cultural and Sport Capital programmes with their effective operating methods; identify common values, harness potential synergies and avoid duplication;

— increase the attractiveness of cities and regions, which can lead to economic growth and job creation.

The operational objectives are:

— to make a maximum of three 'European Capital of Tourism' awards a year;

— to lay down conditions and categories for the 'European Tourism Award';

— to involve Member States on a voluntary basis at the outset and initiate a structural dialogue with the Council;

— to establish the professional body, the preparatory committee to assess the bids, in co-operation with the European Parliament, the Commission and the Committee of Regions;

— as regions are the main beneficiaries of Union funding, to look into the possibility of financial contributions for the sustainability of the programme;

— to create an annual cost-effectiveness plan for the number of titles and awards.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

Capitalising on the European Year of Cultural Heritage 2018, this action will showcase and promote the diversity and richness of European heritage and cultural manifestations (UNESCO World Heritage sites, music and food festivals, folklore and spirituality) as a reason to visit Europe, the continent of culture and creativity.

The activities carried out under this preparatory action could be linked to the theme of 'Culture Europe - Promoting Europe's treasures', with individual countries, regions or macro-regions presenting their distinct heritage and cultural assets to a broad international audience.

The preparatory action builds on and continues the Destination Brand Europe pilot project, but it proposes an enlarged scope and an increased budget. The action will also include promoting less well-known but equally interesting locations and tourism sites, with the ultimate aim of diversifying the range of European destinations, creating new tourism products and supporting less developed regions.

VisitEurope.com, a portal developed with Union support, could be a suitable platform for promotional and marketing activities. Additionally, the '360° European Wonders' app presented by the Commission in 2017 could be integrated into the promotional and marketing strategy.

Ultimately, the action will raise awareness around responsible and sustainable development as regards cultural heritage and the protection of resources for future generations.

The main objectives and actions include:

— preserving Europe's lead position among world tourist destination by promoting European cultural heritage;

— developing and endorsing promotional and marketing channels (online and offline) that will enable destinations to maximise the reach of their tourism offer;

— diversifying the range of European destinations by promoting less visible secondary destinations (so-called 'hidden gems') as new tourism products;

— researching and identifying a number of well-developed and accessible alternative tourist destinations with high potential demand and appeal both internally and in overseas markets;

— engaging with various stakeholders across Member States to raise the visibility of cultural heritage sites;

— providing support to industry partners, especially SMEs in the hospitality and transport sectors, to develop tourism products that incorporate these alternative destinations into their travel packages.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

The World Bridge Tourism pilot project was initiated in the 2015 budget. The main aim of the project was to ensure that Europe should benefit from world bridge tourism by increasing the GDP of the tourism sector. At the same time, it will bring about significant economic growth, including the creation of sustainable employment opportunities.

The preparatory action focuses on China as the fastest-growing tourism source market in the world. As stated in the pilot project, Chinese tourists' propensity to travel abroad is expected to continue rising in the coming decades. Beyond Asia and the Pacific, Europe is the largest destination region for Chinese travellers. As Europe has a prominent place on the Chinese 'wish list', it is necessary to think about how Member States could host Chinese tourists more effectively. This will involve mutual understanding and continuous and sustainable training of employees throughout Europe in the tourism sector.

The preparatory action will increase flows of Chinese visitors by facilitating business between European tourism providers and Chinese buyers.

2018 was EU-China Tourism Year, during the preparatory period for which the World Bridge Tourism project had a crucial role.

The main objectives and actions include:

— identifying best practices and analysing the results of the pilot project;

— continuing the awareness campaign among tour operators and agencies;

— active involvement in the EU-China Tourism Year 2018;

— enlarging the scope of the project by involving Chinese cultural institutes (e.g. the Confucius Institute) and other public outreach stakeholders;

— increasing involvement of social networks and focusing on digitisation, and providing incentives for bringing tourist products and services into line with the needs of Chinese tourists, including the use of marketing tools (websites and flyers in Chinese) and promoting them on Chinese social networks (e.g. Weibo).

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

Knowledge and skills are crucial not only for the personal welfare of each citizen, but also for sustainable development and economic growth. It is therefore important to offer a perspective to people coming from countries in economic and social crisis, especially young people, so that they have an opportunity to create added value not only for themselves, but also for the general public.

It is therefore important to empower young migrants and refugees to gain access to knowledge and to develop skills they are able to use and leverage when they are back in their home countries.

This will make it possible for them not only to establish a livelihood, but also potentially to become entrepreneurs, build up their own businesses and create employment.

The core of this initiative will be targeted mentoring programmes from different organisations, such as civil protection and community services, as well as companies (including local suppliers). Elements of a dual-training system would help beneficiaries to identify the specific needs of organisations or companies on the ground.

The legal situation regarding the waiting period for taking up an economic activity differs considerably from Member State to Member State. To make the preparatory action a success, it will therefore also be necessary to conduct a review of current national legal frameworks and to identify best practices which could be promoted in order to speed up procedures, so that young migrants can take advantage of the proposed programmes as soon as possible upon arrival.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

Increasing SMEs' internationalisation capacity is crucial for European competitiveness. 99 % of Union enterprises are SMEs; most of them face many difficulties when they try to establish an internationalisation strategy, especially vis-à-vis third markets where they face strong — and sometimes unfair — competition. In the last three years, only 29 % of micro enterprises, 43 % of small enterprises and 59 % of medium-sized enterprises have exported to another Member State. Many SMEs do not have the required skills to deal with multinational companies, attend international fairs or set up an e-commerce infrastructure.

This challenge could be overcome by encouraging SMEs to combine and work together on specific internationalisation projects. In the past few years, experiences have shown the potential that cooperation among SMEs offers for enhancing their internationalisation. The added value of cooperation has also been acknowledged by the Commission (e.g. in the SBA review). On the basis of national best practices, the Commission has introduced the concept of 'business network', defining it as 'a form of inter-firm cooperation that allows companies, located also in different regions or countries, to collaborate together on a basis of common development objectives expressed in a cooperation agreement/contract. The companies decide to join their strengths, share information and create synergies to become more innovative and competitive on the domestic and international markets, while keeping their autonomy, not creating a separate legal entity. This cooperation model is suitable for any kind of business activity and sector'.

Internationalisation represents a key component for European growth and competiveness. Taking into account the fact that the difficulties SMEs have in going international, not only in third markets but also in the European internal market, are often due to their limited size, stimulating cooperation and encouraging SMEs to join forces in order to operate on the basis of a better structure while maintaining their entrepreneurial autonomy should be tested and developed. In its Communication 'Small Business, Big World — a new partnership to help SMEs seize global opportunities' (2011), the Commission pointed out the importance of promoting clusters and networks for SME internationalisation. The Enterprise Europe Network plays an essential role in supporting SMEs' internationalisation by matching needs and reducing costs.

In this context, a trial could be launched at Union level to test the impact of SMEs from different Member States joining forces and starting to work together on strengthening internationalisation capacity and enhancing presence on markets in third countries. In particular, the trial could: (1) test the added value for internationalisation of combining SMEs, (2) promote a culture of cooperation and networking activities among SMEs, (3) disseminate this cooperation/networking model as a best practice and as a tangible way for SMEs to enter new markets, by showing that by working together on common internationalisation plans they can greatly improve their international performance.

Networks should be composed of at least three SMEs from three different Member States. Applicants should submit a proposal for an internationalisation strategy, providing a detailed description of the purpose of the collaboration and of the strategic objectives. The trial should cover the costs of the start-up phase for SME network internationalisation activities, such as:

— identifying international markets that SME network members wish to enter to market their products;

— sharing knowledge and information about markets and clients;

— developing coordinated promotion, marketing and sales strategies (including joint digital marketing strategies/ e-commerce infrastructure);

— selecting marketing and distribution channels;

— creating a common brand;

— identifying fairs, exhibitions and national and international business events to promote and market the SMEs' products;

— developing high-quality after-sale assistance and increasing presence on international markets;

— improving product quality, in particular through the exchange of good practices and know-how between SME network members;

— sharing consultancy costs.

Other activities

With a budget of EUR 1 500 000, the pilot project will support 30 SME networks in developing a common internationalisation action plan. Each network will receive financial support of between EUR 30 000 and EUR 50 000. The minimum requirement is three SMEs per network. The action will cover at least 90 European SMEs.

Remarks

Industrial modernisation is critical to improving the Union's competitiveness and is therefore an absolute cornerstone of its policy. In this regard, the ability of industrial companies not only to develop but also to absorb and successfully implement new technologies is crucial. However, this remains a big challenge for many companies.

Different stages can be identified in the process of developing and deploying new technologies. There is mounting evidence that market failure occurs at the demonstration stage (TRL 6-8) of the innovation process: between applied research, prototyping and market entry. Testing and validation of prototypes in an industrial environment and certifying new applications remain both very costly and highly uncertain. In many cases this prevents, or at least substantially delays, market uptake of very promising innovations from research and industry, including those previously financed by the Union. On the one hand, industrial companies very often do not have all the necessary equipment and skills to carry out further prototyping activities, validation tests, certification procedures, cost comparisons and other post-prototyping activities needed before full production and market launch. These activities are usually categorised as so-called 'non-recurrent costs' and contribute to what is commonly known as the 'Valley of Death'. On the other hand, very few regions have all the demonstration capabilities in place to help companies carry out the full spectrum of post-prototyping activities in a specific technology domain.

There is a strong need and rationale to establish an inter-regional innovation structure with pan-European shared demonstration facilities (industry commons) accessible by industry and able to speed up technology deployment in and by industrial companies. Shared demonstration facilities can be established by connecting and upgrading the complementary facilities which already exist in the regions, or by creating new shared facilities if needed.

In the past, and in ongoing activities under Vanguard Initiative (VI) pilot projects (www.s3vanguardinitiative.eu), various regions have found that setting up 'shared demonstration facilities' usually involves a non-profitable component. This funding gap occurs when setting up shared facilities and meeting initial operating costs. Once this funding gap is closed, industrial demonstration activities can take place. If they are successful, companies can then upscale their production, generate revenues in the marketplace and hence generate growth and jobs. In order to speed up technology deployment and industrial modernisation, stronger public intervention is therefore needed to unlock innovation and growth potential. At the moment, there is no suitable cross-regional, pan-European instrument to support very much needed investments in innovation infrastructure.

In this context, this preparatory action will complement and further expand the ongoing activities under the VI and the Thematic Smart Specialisation Platform for Industrial Modernisation (TSSP IM). While the TSSP IM and its inter-regional partnerships, such as VI, are instrumental in detecting and initiating inter-regional collaboration for technology uptake, this action will support the development of investments, operations and services, and defray coordination costs for shared demonstration facilities serving a customer base of industrial organisations throughout Europe.

This preparatory action will be particularly important in generating input for the (re)designing of various Union policies, including innovation (FP9), investment (EFSI) and cohesion policy. The action will identify the scope and limitations of existing funds and financial instruments for ultimately stimulating the uptake of market-creating technologies and the promotion of follow-up investments by the private sector, including through close or closer cooperation with industry associations, thereby providing useful input for policy makers.

This preparatory action will focus on the specific VI pilot project for shared demonstration facilities for 'High Performance Production through 3D Printing' (3DP). The 3DP pilot project is among the most advanced, but it faces a huge investment challenge for several of its industrial applications. 3D printing has also been identified as a disruptive technology significantly impacting a broad range of industrial sectors.

Specifically, the preparatory action will focus on the following activities:

(1) setting up an operational platform of connected demonstration facilities between regions by, inter alia:

— connecting demonstration facilities to form a virtual support platform;

— monitoring the provision of know-how, equipment and services to industry, ensuring broad sectoral coverage;

— if needed, expanding the network of connected facilities to improve industrial and/or geographical coverage;

— setting up a network of accredited service providers throughout Europe (for support, training, certification, etc. within the networked demonstration facilities);

(2) attracting industrial demonstration projects via the platform by, inter alia:

— interacting with key stakeholders;

— promoting the platform and identifying opportunities;

— further developing 3DP demonstration cases and use cases, creating new value chains;

— identifying the specific coordination costs and investment support needs;

— communicating and working with a wider audience, including making use of the TSSP IM;

— working on synergies between the relevant pilot project and related initiatives;

— gaining specific knowledge on funding issues to address specific investment needs;

(3) providing an overview of specific proposals for changes to Union policies, in consultation with the Commission.

For proper implementation and evaluation, a timeframe of three years (2018-2020) is needed, including an annual update of the roadmap by a strategy board that will also include Members of the European Parliament.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

This preparatory action will create a business-enabling network for SMEs to seize circular economy business opportunities. It will advance a new type of environmentally friendly industry, where the worthless is turned into valuable by making full use of all materials, including side flows and waste.

The major chemical-using industries, businesses and associated supply chains in different parts of Europe (notably in Finland, France, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom) attempt to create new business out of side flows and wastes. Side flows can be recovered and used as raw materials in new industries. By refining raw materials in the Union, most added value is created in the single market, thus benefitting European economies. This will create jobs and benefit the environment.

The Cir©Lean target group is export-orientated industrial service SMEs which are willing and able and have an international outlook. Cir©Lean will build a systematic, long-term business-enabling network for Union-based SMEs by utilising cross-border, cross-sector and cross-industry knowledge and by developing innovative circular economy business models. The action will help SMEs find ways to increase the value of (currently unidentified) waste and residues by turning them into valuable products to be sold in both the domestic and international markets. The action will enhance industrial symbiosis by increasing the degree of processing of residual waste and landfill and generate new residual waste business.

New business models will be created in cross-border, cross-sector and cross-industry Open Innovation Business workshops where SMEs, primary industries, business developers, educators, researchers, authorities and financiers pool their skills. The Sustainability Assessment Tool developed in Finland will be applied in this work. The workshops will contribute to the development of new knowledge for all participants, creating new commercial products and services that span national borders.

Approximately 20 SMEs will participate in the Cir©Lean preparatory action. As a milestone for the action, 100 SMEs will participate in professional development activities, and, as part of the action, they will gain new contacts and establish cross-border cooperation. When the action is completed, exports will increase and the number of SMEs with new business models will grow. New long-term and sustainable contacts and partnerships with permanent cooperation structures will be established as a result.

Cir©Lean will set up a circular economy business-enabling network that will continue after the preparatory action ends.

Digitalisation is a major current and future challenge in Europe. However, it also represents an opportunity for the creation of new job types. These require in many cases programming skills which should be further promoted among young people, since they are often not part of school curricula. The European Union should encourage young people to take an interest in technology and programming and help to develop their skills in order to prepare them for the future job market.

Organising a programming contest at Union level will have the following advantages:

— promoting an interest in programming and technologies and related skills;

— providing an incentive for young people to develop programming skills through game-based learning;

— promoting the European idea.

Framework of the programming contest:

— implementation in the context of the EU Code Week 2019 and 2020, with the EU's objective being to involve at least 50 % of schools in the Union and Western Balkans by 2020; EU Code Week provides an existing infrastructure and context; — a special initiative should be set up (possibly called a 'createathon') for talented young people who could be given tasks such as developing an app;

Remarks

Youth unemployment remains a significant challenge for Member States. As of February 2018 it stood at 15,9 % in the EU28 and 17,7 % in the euro area. The aim of the initial pilot project was to contribute to reducing youth unemployment through the provision of worker co-operatives by establishing entrepreneurship and sustainable job opportunities for young people to both work in and own part of the company simultaneously, as well as establishing best practice in the area for the Union as a whole.

The pilot project was launched in the three Member States with the most experience in this field, and included objectives such as improving knowledge of the co-operative business concept, guiding students in implementing their own ideas and helping them start up businesses in the form of a co-operative, providing training and internships/apprenticeships in co-operatives and examining how to create synergies with related Union programmes.

With the preparatory action it is now hoped to continue to build on the impact of the project in these three countries and to extend actions to other Member States still struggling with high youth unemployment, such as Greece and Spain.

Tourism is a key sector for economic development and job creation in Europe. Tourism bodies are in a never-ending dispute over a unified classification system for hotels, restaurants and other facilities. As the needs and expectations of consumers evolved, consequently stimulating supply in the hotel sector, it became essential to regulate this area of activity by adopting measures to protect the rights and interests of consumers.

However, consumers' perceptions often do not match what they receive owing to insufficient and ineffective communication.

This project will draw up:

— A framework for comprehensively mapping the existing public and private initiatives (star systems, certification schemes, etc.) for tourism that will harmonise the classification system in terms of accuracy and how up-to-date the information is, and will bring transparency and consistency to service quality evaluation and performance;

— A framework for the content of information provided by travel agencies, tour operators, online booking sites and review sites; the information provided to consumers should be examined, compared and compatible with Union level criteria for the initiatives in question;

— A framework for trans-national cooperation between public authorities and industries to improve the content of 'terms and conditions' and ensure a fair 'agreement' between the service provider and the tourist; the agreement should specify, among other things, the payment conditions and the rights of the tourist, especially in cases where the contracted services are not adequately performed;

— The feasibility of establishing principles at Union level for tourism service quality, including Union competence, added value and technical viability.

Remarks

One major objective of the Union institutions is to improve coordination of policy at Union and Member State level as regards promoting the use of ICT in education, training and learning systems. One condition for integrating ICT is to increase the availability and quality of connectivity to broadband internet services for schools and classrooms, especially in rural and low population density areas, by adopting dedicated policies.

The Commission has allocated resources for enhancing school connectivity to the internet, promoting policy coordination through various initiatives. One such initiative was set out in the Commission communication on 'Opening up Education: Innovative teaching and learning for all through new Technologies and Open Educational Resources, which clearly stated that "Enhancing local ICT infrastructure (broadband, content, tools) is still needed in some parts of Europe..." and that "Member States are investing in upgrading their national educational infrastructure (ICT, digital educational resources, broadband) but fragmentation and incoherence among Member States persists. On average, 93 % of students in the Union have access to the internet at home, but only 72 % have access to it at a place of education, sometimes not in the classroom.'

Innovation in the education sector remains a key priority for the Commission as is clearly stated in the communication on 'Connectivity for a Competitive Digital Single Market — Towards a European Gigabit Society' (COM(2016) 587 final). The European Parliament, in its resolution of 1 June 2017 on internet connectivity for growth, competitiveness and cohesion: European gigabit society and 5G (2016/2305(INI)), welcomed the ambitious plan to provide ultra-fast internet in primary and secondary schools, universities and libraries by 2025, in line with the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality. It also stressed that faster and better connectivity provides huge opportunities to enhance teaching methods, to foster research and to develop high quality educational services online as well as to create better opportunities for distance learning.

The European Parliament also emphasised that, in order for the gigabit target to have its full impact on our economy and not to miss opportunities, it is important to close the digital divide and prevent the opening of new divides, and to this end funding opportunities should be explored by Member States and the Commission in support of the achievement for the main socio-economic drivers (schools, universities, public administrations).

In 2016, many schools in the Union still lacked broadband access (especially primary schools, 25 % of which had no broadband access or even no internet access at all). The main reasons for this are:

— poor awareness among schools and local authorities of the technical options available to access broadband internet;

— a limited number of dedicated, large national institutional support programmes;

— lack of knowledge about possible funding options, including voucher schemes, and how to implement them.

In 2015, the Commission published a call for tenders for a feasibility study on the provision of satellite broadband for schools located in rural areas and not covered by any fixed wired or wireless broadband.

That study, called 'Satellite broadband for schools: Feasibility study' (SMART 2015/0061), was published in September 2017. It confirmed that the use of satellite-based access and distribution is an efficient solution to make broadband internet and educational multimedia content immediately available to schools that are now unconnected or poorly connected and would otherwise remain so for some time to come.

Objective of the pilot project

The objective of the pilot project is to build on the results of the feasibility study with field trials in Union regions containing schools in digital divide areas. In particular, it will help assess the benefits of immediate connectivity via satellite broadband for schools affected by the digital divide, with the support of regional or national authorities, in advance of the even greater benefits that the European Gigabit Society will subsequently make widely available.

Accordingly, the two-year pilot project will:

(i) identify Union regions that have a large number of schools (particularly primary schools) affected by long-term digital divide;

(ii) apply simple, efficient and cost-effective voucher schemes to subsidise procurement of satellite broadband for access to and distribution of educational multimedia content, for example through the creation of digital libraries, as recommended in the feasibility study; and

(iii) foster outreach and communication, for example through workshops.

In this process the pilot project will involve relevant European stakeholders in the ICT supply chain and ensure coordination with educational stakeholders (education ministries, Commission, etc.).

The pilot project could be carried out by means of a grant awarded without a call for proposals to the Network of European Regions Using Space Technologies (NEREUS), which is a dynamic platform for all European regions wishing to use space technologies to improve their public policies for the benefit of their citizens. The pilot project will run for two years (2018 and 2019) on the basis of that grant.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover the costs of the functioning and activities of European non-governmental and non-profit organisations representing the interests of SMEs and consumers, as well as environmental and social interests, in standardisation activities.

Such representation in the standardisation process at European level forms part of the statutory objectives of such organisations, and they have been mandated by national non-profit organisations in at least two thirds of the Member States to represent those interests.

Contributions to such European organisations have previously been covered by the Competitiveness and Innovation Programme, the consumer policy and the Financial Instrument for the environment, LIFE+. In Regulation (EU) No 1025/2012 the actions in the field of standardisation financed by specific programmes have been brought together in a single legal act.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

Having regard to paragraph 40 of the European Parliament recommendation of 4 April 2017 to the Council and the Commission following the inquiry into emission measurements in the automotive sector (P8_TA(2017) 100), this pilot project will fund measures relating to in-service conformity checks by third-party testing in relation to the transposition of the Regulation (EC) No 715/2007.

In the past, qualified third parties provided authorities at Union and national level with reliable information on the emission behaviour of vehicles. That information was rarely made available by the responsible authorities. Funding should be made available to allow them to provide reliable data from on-road emissions testing of passenger cars which is independent of the data provided by manufacturers and the regulatory authorities in order to promote transparency and improve market surveillance. To guarantee their independence, third parties must not be providing, or have provided in the past, vehicle emissions testing or similar (studies, measurements, etc.) services for industry stakeholders.

The third parties will validate the test procedures by referring to the provisions laid down in Regulation (EC) No 715/2007, Commission Regulation (EC) No 692/2008 and the first three RDE packages (Commission Regulations (EU) 2016/427, (EU) 2016/646 and (EU) 2017/1151) and the guidelines outlined in the Commission notice of 26 January 2017. They will publish the results of their measurements in order to support the development of best practice procedures and the provision of broader information to the responsible authorities and the public. The third parties will not only measure exhaust gases and particle emissions from passenger cars.

Independent third parties will thus contribute to better oversight on how exhaust standards are preforming in practice and to what extent the Union's objectives in terms of air quality and climate policy are being achieved. They will contribute to a broader understanding of exhaust reduction strategies with regard to acceleration, high speed, ambient temperature and other criteria. Their specific test procedure will be documented transparently and should take into account current rules on RDE and the latest research.

Remarks

In the second phase of this pilot project starting from 2019 actions will focus on:

— continuing a testing exercise consisting of a series of market research surveys of several categories of consumer products in various Member States;

— expanding the scope to non-food products (e.g. detergents, cosmetics, toiletries, baby products) in order to compare their quality characteristics when sold under the same brand name, in the same packaging and with the same marketing texts; this includes adapting the Union harmonised testing methodology for use with non-food products;

— further developing the relevant consumer and market research into the dual quality of food products, including the impact of ingredient pricing, factors influencing consumer behaviour and consumers' brand-related expectations;

— setting up a steering committee to oversee the pilot project; MEPs and other stakeholders will take part in all proceedings of the committee and play an active role in identifying working priorities for the second phase of the pilot project, in particular in defining which products are to be selected, sampled and tested and undergo a sensory analysis;

— strengthening multi-stakeholder dialogue, in which MEPs will play an active role, and preparing a final report to be presented in the Member States;

— developing instructions for competent authorities on how to apply current and future legislation addressing dual-quality and unfair trading practices in a transparent and uniform way in all Member States; conducting various policy-focused analyses of the data produced by the JRC with a view to enabling competent authorities to apply legislation in the most effective manner.

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

The pilot project consists of a series of market investigations into several categories of consumer products in different Member States.

It will compare the qualitative characteristics of products that are sold in the single market under the same brand and in the same packaging and with the use of other marketing texts.

The pilot project will reveal how the quality of products under the same brands differs between Member States. The research will also include a comparative analysis of the labelling and consumer information for those products.

It will focus on food and non-food products. In the first phase only food products will be examined.

If the pilot project is continued, non-food products will also be examined.

With regard to food, each of the Eurostat-defined product groups examined will contain an adequate number of representative products. For non-food products, different product groups will also be represented. This may include detergents, cosmetics, toiletries and baby-products.

Products chosen will be those that consumers could reasonably believe to be the same, especially with regard to package labelling, brand name and the use of other marketing texts.

The investigation will be undertaken in at least half of the Member States, covering a representative cross-section in terms of population, Harmonised Index of Consumer Prices and geographical area. The scope of the investigation, including the selection of Member States and categories of products, will be decided by a task force on dual quality of products composed of representatives of Member States' competent authorities, consumer organisations, industry, the Commission and members of the European Parliament's Committee on Internal Market and Consumer Protection.

The following assessment will be carried for all products tested:

— physical-chemical testing;

— sensory testing;

— conformity with label declaration;

— price comparison;

— weight/volume comparison.

At the end of the pilot project, the Commission will publish a report informing the European Parliament and consumers in all Members States of the outcome of the investigation. It will be translated into the languages of the Member States where the investigation has been carried out and distributed to stakeholders. In order to raise consumer awareness, the report will also be publicised in the relevant Member States with the active involvement of European Parliament Information Offices, Commission Representations and Members of the European Parliament.

Remarks

In recent decades, Europe has made substantial improvements in fire safety by continuously enhancing regulations and the implementation of national fire safety measures. The rate of fire fatalities in Member States fell by 65 % between 1979 and 2007, although with significant disparities across Member States. A better understanding of these differences will help identify best practices. According to statistics, fire fatalities represent about 2 % of accidental deaths in the Union (Commission study regarding Regulation (EU) No 305/2011 on the toxicity of smoke produced by construction products in fires).

The Commission's study revealed an important data gap in the coverage of statistical information on fire safety and fire casualties in buildings across Europe. In addition, the nature and format of data collected varies greatly across Member States, which hinders data comparison and thereby to effectively assessing potential best practices and successful safety approaches.

Furthermore, recent tragic events have rightly triggered renewed attention on how to improve fire safety in buildings in Europe. One example is the Directive (EU) 2018/844 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 30 May 2018 amending Directive 2010/31/EU on the energy performance of buildings and Directive 2012/27/EU on energy efficiency (OJ L 156, 19.6.2018, p. 75), in which the Council and the European Parliament emphasise the importance of fire safety, in particular the renovation of existing buildings in Europe.

The planned enhanced efforts to renovate the building stock in Europe present an added opportunity to further improve fire safety, while recognising that the issue of fire safety and prevention remains relevant in a context going beyond renovations. Electrical safety is another key aspect and might be influenced by the increased deployment of infrastructure for electric vehicles in buildings as well as enhanced interactions between buildings and the grid.

This pilot project will address the data gap in Europe in the area of fire casualties, fire safety measures and fire prevention measures.

The pilot project will take into account and make use of any initiatives by the new Fire Information Exchange Platform (FIEP), recently established by the Commission. The results of this project will also support the work of the FIEP.

The pilot project will fund a Union-wide analysis and assessment of available fire safety data, identify data gaps and draw up recommendations for:

(a) Union-level actions to support enhanced data collection and data streamlining in statistics regarding fire casualties, fire safety and fire prevention (closing data gaps)

(b) Union-level actions to support the domestic fire safety and fire prevention efforts of Member States, including in relation to the renovation of buildings (Union-wide fire safety awareness campaign)

The pilot project could lead to subsequent preparatory action to launch Union-level actions and initiatives in support of Member States' fire safety and fire prevention efforts, including their building renovation efforts, thereby supporting safety for Europeans as well as sustainable growth and job creation in Europe.

The pilot project will be implemented by the Commission with possible assistance by external contractors, research facilities and relevant stakeholders.

CHAPTER 02 04 — HORIZON 2020 — RESEARCH RELATING TO ENTERPRISES (cont'd)

Remarks

These remarks are applicable to all the budget lines in this chapter.

This appropriation will be used for the Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation which covers the 2014 to 2020 period, and for the completion of the previous research programmes (Seventh Framework Programme and preceding framework programmes) and the Competitiveness and Innovation Framework Programme (CIP).

Horizon 2020 shall play a central role in the implementation of the Europe 2020 flagship initiative 'Innovation Union' and other flagship initiatives, notably 'Resource efficient Europe', 'An industrial policy for the globalisation era', and 'A digital agenda for Europe', as well as in the development and functioning of the European Research Area. Horizon 2020 shall contribute to building an economy based on knowledge and innovation across the whole Union by leveraging sufficient additional research, development and innovation funding. It will be carried out in order to pursue the general objectives set out in Article 179 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, in order to contribute to the creation of a society of knowledge, based on the European Research Area, i.e. supporting transnational cooperation at all levels throughout the Union, taking the dynamism, creativity and the excellence of European research to the limits of knowledge, strengthening human resources for research and for technology in Europe, quantitatively and qualitatively and research and innovation capacities in the whole of Europe and ensuring optimum use thereof.

In Horizon 2020, gender equality is addressed as a cross-cutting issue in order to rectify imbalances between women and men and to integrate a gender dimension in research and innovation content. Particular account will be taken of the need to step up efforts to enhance the participation at all levels, including decision making, of women in research and innovation.

Also entered against these articles and items are the costs of high-level scientific and technological meetings, conferences, workshops and seminars of European interest organised by the Commission, the funding of high-level scientific and technological analyses and evaluations carried out on behalf of the Union to investigate new areas of research suitable for Union action, inter alia, in the context of the European Research Area, and measures to monitor and disseminate the results of the programmes, including measures under previous framework programmes.

This appropriation will be used in accordance with Regulation (EU) No 1290/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2013 laying down the rules for participation and dissemination in 'Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation (2014-2020)' and repealing Regulation (EC) No 1906/2006 (OJ L 347, 20.12.2013, p. 81).

The contributions from the EFTA States pursuant to the Agreement on the European Economic Area, and in particular Article 82 thereof and Protocol 32 thereto, must be added to the appropriations entered in this chapter. By way of information, those amounts derive from contributions from the EFTA States entered against Article 6 3 0 of the statement of revenue, which constitute assigned revenue in accordance with points (b), (e), and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation; they give rise to the provision of corresponding appropriations and to implementation under the 'European Economic Area' Annex to this part of the statement of expenditure in this section, which forms an integral part of the general budget.

The possibility of third countries or institutes from third countries taking part in European cooperation in the field of scientific and technical research is envisaged for some of these projects. Any financial contribution entered in Items 6 0 1 3 and 6 0 1 5 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Any revenue from States taking part in the European cooperation in the field of scientific and technical research entered in Item 6 0 1 6 of the of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Remarks

The aim of this appropriation is to help remedy market deficiencies in accessing risk finance for research and innovation. In particular, the equity facility will target investments in risk capital funds which make early stage investments. It shall enable equity investments in, amongst others, seed capital funds, cross-border seed funds, business angel co-investment vehicles and early-stage venture capital funds. The equity facility, which will be demand-driven, shall use a portfolio approach, where venture capital funds and other comparable intermediaries select the firms in which to invest. Special attention should be paid to encouraging female entrepreneurs to participate in such schemes.

Any repayment from financial instruments pursuant to Article 209(3) of the Financial Regulation, including capital repayments, guarantees released, and repayment of the principal of loans, paid back to the Commission and entered in Item 6 4 1 1 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with point (f) of Article 21(3) of the Financial Regulation.

02 04 03 Societal challenges

Remarks

This priority of Horizon 2020 responds directly to the policy priorities and societal challenges identified in the Europe 2020 strategy. Those activities will be implemented using a challenge-based approach which brings together resources and knowledge across different fields, technologies and disciplines. The activities will cover the full cycle from research to market, with a new focus on innovation-related activities such as piloting, demonstration, test-beds, support for public procurement, design, end-user driven innovation, social innovation and market take-up of innovations. The activities will support directly the corresponding sectoral policy competences at Union level.

Remarks

Europe faces today an increasingly deteriorating security situation with the emergence of new or existing threats; the financial crisis has put constant pressure on national defence budgets and since 2006, the budget spent on defence R&D in Europe decreased by 30 %. In this context, Member States and public opinion look to the Union for greater involvement in security and defence.

The main objective of the preparatory action is to prepare and test mechanisms for conducting Union-funded defence research, including a mechanism of cooperation with the European Defence Agency, with a view to prepare, organise and deliver a variety of defence research activities. The final aim of these activities is to foster the competitiveness and innovation capacity of the defence industry throughout the Union. It needs to produce visible and timely results for the decision making in view of the discussion on a possible defence research programme within the next Multiannual Financial Framework.

The research & technology programme of the preparatory action will be implemented by annual work programmes, mainly through calls for proposals for research projects and procurement. Tasks related to the implementation of the work programmes will be delegated to the European Defence Agency. The preparatory action will cover all needed expenses to prepare and test mechanisms for conducting Union-funded defence research, including expenditure related to information and publications, dissemination, technical and administrative assistance, consultancy, studies and expert groups.

In 2019, this appropriation would cover funding for a number of research projects, inter alia, on critical defence technologies on electronic protection, radar and advanced communication as well as future disruptive technologies. The precise scope of the topics will be defined in consultation with the Member States and the defence-related R&D stakeholders, and assistance from experts.

Any revenue from contributions from third countries entered in Item 6 0 3 3 of the statement of revenue will give rise to the provision of additional appropriations to be entered in this Item in accordance with the Financial Regulation.

Vehicle emissions tests using PEMS or remote sensing show that some EURO 5 and EURO 6 vehicles still emit significantly more NOx under real-world conditions compared to laboratory test results. Only since the introduction of the real driving emission (RDE) test with EURO 6d (from 1 September 2017 onwards) have discrepancies between type-approved and real-world emissions been reduced.

In order to improve the real-world environmental performance of type-approved EURO 5 and EURO 6 vehicles (before the introduction of RDE), retrofitting of vehicles is required.

On 16 April 2018, the Commission awarded the Horizon Prize on Engine Retrofit for Clean Air. The prize demonstrated the effectiveness of retrofits and the relatively low costs, and spurred the development of new technologies that can be applied to recent EURO 5 and EURO 6 diesel engines.

Further work to assess the effectiveness of retrofit options, building on the Horizon Prize on Engine Retrofit for Clean Air, is required. A broad range of technologies should be assessed on a variety of engine technologies of various EURO classes, including Gasoline Particle Filters retrofit options. Moreover, possible certification schemes for retrofit solutions should be assessed, in order to provide clear information to consumers and enhance trust in the effectiveness of retrofit options.

The pilot project has the following goals:

— to carry out a broad testing exercise, testing the effectiveness of various retrofit options to determine which technologies under which conditions are able to meet the EURO 6 emission limit values (ELV) and the relevant access requirements for low-emission zones (LEZ), using laboratory tests and the RDE test, and covering a broad range of driving conditions, engine technologies and EURO classes;

— to assess a variety of possible certification schemes for retrofit solutions.

The project builds on the work already carried out by the Commission in the context of the Horizon Prize.

Remarks

Europe is increasingly reliant on space technologies, with the satellite sector providing new applications in both the civilian and military spheres. The risk of interference between space actors and space objects is increasing. There is a clear need for space traffic management (STM) in order to ensure that space activities (exploration and utilisation of space, space applications and services) are carried out safely and to shape the development of the legal and regulatory framework for space activities. The legal foundation is provided by international space law treaties. The Space Situational Awareness (SSA) programme could be a basis for STM.

STM could comprise the following actions:

(1) interdisciplinary research;

(2) opinion building;

(3) advancing technical prerequisites and international cooperation;

(4) preparation in UNCOPUOS, ITU, ICAO and inter-governmental forums;

(5) raising public awareness.

Objectives of STM:

(1) guaranteeing the prosperity and advancement of future generations by keeping spaceflight safe and space exploration and use sustainable;

(2) dealing with the problems and promises of spaceflight by addressing all phases of traffic entering, operating in and returning from outer space;

(3) tackling the ongoing decline in safety and sustainability by tying together existing technologies, infrastructures and legal instruments.

Remarks

The aim of this appropriation is to:

— enable operations of Copernicus services, tailored to the needs of users;

— contribute to ensure access to data of the observation infrastructure necessary to operate Copernicus services;

— create opportunities for increased private sector usage of information sources, thereby facilitating innovation by value-adding service providers.

This appropriation will, in particular, fund the set-up, the establishment and operation of the six services mentioned in Regulation (EU) No 377/2014 and the related activities.

This appropriation may also fund cross-cutting activities among the services or their articulation and co-ordination, as well as for the in-situ co-ordination, user uptake and training and communication.

The budget envelope will be managed either directly by the Commission services or indirectly via delegation agreements with Union agencies and international organisations, or any entity eligible under Article 62 of the Financial Regulation.

When the Commission manages the budget directly, it may entrust the Joint Research Centre (JRC) with scientific and technical support tasks. The funding of these tasks may be entered into the JRC's indirect budget under point (g) of Article 21(2) and point (d) of Article 30(1) of the Financial Regulation.

In addition, in support of competiveness and growth, this appropriation may also fund data dissemination and the incubation of new businesses by supporting more robust and innovative IT structures in Europe.

Copernicus services will facilitate access to key data required in policy formulation at Union, national, regional and local level in fields such as agriculture, forest monitoring, water management, transport, urban planning, climate change and many others. This appropriation covers mainly the implementation of delegation agreements for the Copernicus programme, pursuant to Article 58 of the Financial Regulation.

— create opportunities for increased private sector usage of information sources, thereby facilitating innovation by value-adding service providers.

The development of a European space infrastructure has a key role in enhancing competitiveness and innovation, and requires consistent public intervention to sustain the industrial effort.

This appropriation will fund the development and construction of satellites, as well as their operation. The data and information obtained through the space infrastructure is subject to the free, full and open data policy, which will increase their availability and thereby boost the downstream market.

To supplement the data needed by users, this appropriation may also fund the acquisition of data from third parties and the access to contributing mission from Member States, as well as the dedicated dissemination platform (core ground segment) which will serve, in priority the operational services funded by Article 02 06 01.

The budget envelope will be managed either directly by the Commission services or indirectly via delegation agreements with Union agencies and international organisations, or any entity eligible under Article 58 of the Financial Regulation.

When the Commission manages the budget directly, it may entrust the Joint Research Centre (JRC) with scientific and technical support tasks. The funding of these tasks may be entered into the JRC's indirect budget under point (g) of Article 21(2) and point (d) of Article 30(1) of the Financial Regulation.

New Article

The objective of the Development Programme is to support the development of actions and technologies in the field of defence. Union support will be granted only for cooperative projects involving at least three undertakings from at least two Member States. The projects will be selected in accordance with the comitology procedure and will be fully consistent with the Union capability priorities defined by Member States. As regards the development of prototypes, the Union financing will only support a proportion of total costs, whilst remaining costs will normally be covered by Member States. For other actions or technologies, the Union financing can cover up to total costs. The definitive proportion of costs covered by the Union budget will be decided in the work programme prepared in accordance with the comitology rules. The Programme will apply only for two years: 2019 and 2020.

Remarks

In order to ensure that the rules on competition concerning agreements, decisions by associations of undertakings and concerted practices (Article 101 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union), abuses of a dominant position (Article 102 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union), aids granted by States (Articles 107 and 108 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union) and concentrations between undertakings (Regulation (EC) No 139/2004) are enforced, the Commission is empowered to take decisions, to conduct investigations and to impose penalties or order recovery.

The Commission's decisions are subject to review by the Court of Justice of the European Union in accordance with the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union.

As a prudential measure, it is appropriate to take into account the possibility of budgetary implications stemming from rulings of the Court of Justice of the European Union.

This appropriation is intended to cover any expenditure arising from damages awarded by the Court of Justice of the European Union to claimants and resulting from legal proceedings against the Commission's decisions in the field of competition.

Since a reasonable estimate of the financial impact on the general budget cannot be established beforehand, a token entry ('p.m.') appears in this article. If necessary, the Commission will propose to make available the appropriations related to actual needs by means of transfers or through a draft amending budget.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover ESF support under the Investment for growth and jobs goal in less developed regions in the 2014-2020 programming period. The catching-up process for these economically and socially lagging regions requires long-term sustained efforts. This category of regions concerns those regions whose GDP per capita is less than 75 % of the average GDP of the EU-27.

Promotion of equality between women and men horizontally and through specific actions should be part of the support provided by the ESF, in order to improve the employability of women and their participation in the labour market. Special attention should be paid to non-discrimination in the labour market, combating the feminisation of poverty, access to education and affordable childcare services.

Legal basis

Regulation (EU) No 1303/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 17 December 2013 laying down common provisions on the European Regional Development Fund, the European Social Fund, the Cohesion Fund, the European Agricultural Fund for Rural Development and the European Maritime and Fisheries Fund and laying down general provisions on the European Regional Development Fund, the European Social Fund, the Cohesion Fund and the European Maritime and Fisheries Fund and repealing Council Regulation (EC) No 1083/2006 (OJ L 347, 20.12.2013, p. 320).

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover ESF support under the Investment for growth and jobs goal in the 2014-2020 programming period in a new category of region ('transition regions') that replaces the 2007-2013 phasing-out and phasing-in system. This category of regions includes all regions with a GDP per capita between 75 and 90 % of the average GDP of the EU-27.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover ESF support under the Investment for growth and jobs goal in more developed regions in the 2014-2020 programming period. While interventions in the less developed regions will remain the priority for cohesion policy, this appropriation is thus intended to cover important challenges that concern all Member States such as global competition in the knowledge-based economy, the shift towards the low carbon economy and social polarisation exacerbated by the current economic climate. This category of regions concerns those regions whose GDP per capita is above 90 % of the average GDP of the EU-27.

Gender mainstreaming and gender equality specific actions should be part of the support provided by the ESF, in order to improve the employability of women and their participation in the labour market. It represents the specific allocation to the Youth Employment Initiative under the Investment for growth and jobs goal in regions with a level of youth unemployment exceeding 25 % in 2012 or for Member States where the youth unemployment rate has increased by more than 30 % in 2012, regions that have a youth unemployment rate of more than 20 % in 2012. While promoting gender equality, special attention should be paid to the situation of young women who can face gender-specific obstacles to get a good quality offer of employment, continued education, an apprenticeship or a traineeship.

This appropriation is to be used, amongst others, to support the establishment of educational structures combining non-formal education, language courses, democratic awareness and vocational training in the regions most affected by youth unemployment, both by state-actors and non-governmental organisations.

The general objective of the European Union programme for Employment and Social Innovation (EaSI) is to contribute to the Europe 2020 strategy and the related headline targets for employment, education and poverty by providing financial support for the Union's objectives.

To achieve the general objectives of EaSI in terms of promoting a high level of employment, guaranteeing adequate social protection, combating social exclusion and poverty, improving working conditions and protecting workers' safety and health, the specific objectives of the Progress axis are to:

— develop and disseminate high-quality comparative analytical knowledge in order to ensure that Union employment and social policy and working conditions and occupational health and safety legislation are based on sound evidence and are relevant to needs, challenges and conditions in the individual Member States and the other participating countries,

— facilitate effective and inclusive information-sharing, mutual learning and dialogue on Union employment and social policy and working conditions and occupational health and safety legislation at Union, national and international level in order to assist the Member States and the other participating countries in developing their policies and in implementing Union law,

— provide policymakers with financial support to promote social and labour market policy reforms, build up the main actors' capacity to design and implement social experimentation, and make the relevant knowledge and expertise accessible,

— provide Union and national organisations with financial support to develop, promote and support the implementation of Union employment and social policy and working conditions and occupational health and safety legislation,

— raising awareness, exchanging good practice, disseminating information and promoting the debate on the key challenges and policy issues in relation to working conditions, gender equality, occupational health and safety and the reconciliation of work and family life and the ageing society, including among social partners,

— to encourage job creation, promote youth employment and fight poverty by promoting increased social convergence by means of the Social Mark.

In addition support could be provided to actions related to the implementation of the common provisions of EaSI such as monitoring, evaluation, dissemination of results and communication. Article 16 of Regulation (EU) No 1296/2013 describes the types of actions which may be financed.

— ensure that job vacancies and applications, and any related information as well as working conditions and rights are transparent for the potential applicants and the employers; this shall be achieved through their exchange and dissemination at transnational, interregional and cross-border level using standard interoperability forms,

— help ensure that European-level job vacancies and mobility options are advertised in parallel to national job vacancies and applications and not only after local or national options are exhausted,

— develop services for the recruitment and placing of workers in employment through the clearance of job vacancies and applications at European level; this shall cover all phases of placement, ranging from pre-recruitment preparation to post-placement assistance, including language skill development options, with a view to the applicant's successful integration into the labour market; such services shall include targeted mobility schemes to fill job vacancies where labour market shortcomings have been identified and/or help particular groups of workers such as young people,

— initial and further training of EURES advisers in the Member States,

— contacts between EURES advisers and cooperation between government employment services, including those of candidate countries,

— promotion of EURES among firms and the general public,

— development of special structures for cooperation and services in border regions pursuant to point (b) of Article 17(1) of Regulation (EEC) No 1612/68, — measures to help remove mobility obstacles, particularly in the field of work-related social security.

This programme should also facilitate the matching and placement of apprentices and trainees as a critical element in helping the transition of young people from school to work, as already begun under the preparatory action 'Your first EURES job' and complemented by the Youth Employment Initiative. Companies, particularly small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), will be encouraged to recruit more young people, including by financial support.

Target groups:

— young people up to 30 years of age, regardless of their qualifications and work experience, as the scheme is not exclusively tailored for labour market entrants,

— all legally established businesses, particularly SMEs, to assist with reducing the costs of international hiring that affect mostly smaller companies.

Eligible jobs under this part of the programme will offer young people apprenticeships, a first work experience or specialised jobs. The scheme will not support situations of job substitution or precarious employment, or in any circumstances be contrary to national labour law.

To be eligible for funding, jobs have also to comply with the following criteria:

— be located in a EURES member country other than the country of origin of the young job-seeker (transnational vacancies),

— ensure a work placement for a minimum contractual period of 6 months.

The contributions from the EFTA States pursuant to the Agreement on the European Economic Area, and in particular Article 82 thereof and Protocol 32 thereto, must be added to the appropriations entered in this item. By way of information, these amounts derive from contributions from the EFTA States entered against Article 6 3 0 of the statement of revenue, which constitute assigned revenue in accordance with points (b), (e) and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation; they give rise to the provision of corresponding appropriations and to implementation under the 'European Economic Area' Annex to this part of the statement of expenditure in this section, which forms an integral part of the general budget.

In addition support could be provided to actions related to the implementation of the common provisions of EaSI such as monitoring, evaluation, dissemination of results and communication. Article 21 of Regulation (EU) No 1296/2013 describes the types of actions which may be financed.

Remarks

The general objective of the EaSI is to contribute to the Europe 2020 strategy and the related headline targets for employment, education and poverty by providing financial support for the Union's objectives.

The EaSI is structured around three complementarity axes: Progress, EURES and Microfinance and Social Entrepreneurship.

To achieve the general objectives of EaSI in particular to promote employment and social inclusion by increasing the availability and accessibility of microfinance for vulnerable groups and micro-enterprises, and by increasing access to finance for social enterprises, the specific objectives of the Microfinance and Social Entrepreneurship axis are to:

— increase access to, and the availability of, microfinance for persons who have lost or are at risk of losing their jobs, or who have difficulty in entering or re-entering the labour market, persons at risk of social exclusion and vulnerable persons, including women wishing to start entrepreneurial careers, who are in a disadvantaged position with regard to access to the conventional credit market and who wish to start up or develop their own micro-enterprises; and for micro-enterprises, especially those which employ these persons as referred to,

— build up the institutional capacity of microcredit providers,

— support the development of social enterprises.

Remarks

Inequalities are considered to be a cause of macroeconomic destabilisation and to reduce growth. Therefore European and national action to correct inequalities affecting children can be seen as a long-term policy for macroeconomic stabilisation and growth. Opening up opportunities can spur stronger economic performance and improve living standards.

Fighting poverty and social exclusion is one of the Europe 2020 targets: to reduce by at least 20 million the number of people in or at risk of poverty and social exclusion. However, between 2008 and 2014, the number of people at risk of poverty or social exclusion in the EU-27 increased from 116 million to 121 million; almost every fourth person in the EU-27 is at risk of poverty or social exclusion. Amongst this group, child poverty is alarming. In 2014, more than 26 million children in the Union were at risk of poverty and more than nine million suffered from severe material deprivation. If no measures are taken to correct this situation, they will be at greater risk of failing in the education system (Europe 2020 target for education) and will have the most difficulties in entering the labour market (Europe 2020 target for employment). The child guarantee is an integrated approach to tackling child poverty, aiming at fully implementing the Commission's 'Investing in Children' recommendation, to ensure that every child in Europe at risk of poverty (including refugees) has access to free health care, free education, free childcare, decent housing and adequate nutrition. Covering these five areas of action through European and national action plans would ensure that the living conditions and opportunities of millions of children in Europe improve considerably and with a long-term perspective. The child guarantee is a key horizontal policy and should be regarded as an investment in the stability and prosperity of the Union, which is necessary for preserving the Union's growth potential.

To make the child guarantee a successful instrument in the fight against child poverty, Union financial support should be put in place to ensure a coordinated effort together with Member States towards common goals with binding indicators. The preparatory action will lay down the implementing framework for the child guarantee:

(1) selecting comparative measurable criteria to assign funds in accordance with the Commission's 'Investing in Children' recommendation;

(2) assessing existing national and Union interventions tackling multi-dimensional aspects of child poverty and mapping best practices;

(3) delineating the typology of programmes to be funded;

(4) establishing funding arrangements; and

(5) establishing governance mechanisms, including monitoring and evaluation.

This will be achieved through independent research work, consultations with partners (e.g. governmental institutions, NGOs, academia, the private sector and the European Network of Ombudspersons for Children) and technical workshops.

The first two years of this preparatory action have been dedicated to mapping child poverty in Europe, its mechanisms and causes, and the feasibility and conditions for implementing the Child Guarantee, notably by analysing four specific groups of vulnerable children that are known to be particularly at risk (children in precarious families, children residing in institutions, children of recent migrants and refugees and disabled children, and other children with special needs).

The third year of the preparatory action will be dedicated to developing experimental projects, putting into practice the results of previous analyses in order to test whether a child guarantee scheme could provide a new approach to reducing child poverty in a sustainable way and to determine whether a child guarantee scheme can better support vulnerable children and improve their education, health, housing, nutrition and the labour market integration of parents where relevant.

These projects will be carried out in the field, and will specifically verify, in concrete and controlled circumstances, the feasibility and effectiveness of a Union-wide initiative to support social, economic and educational integration and to implement 'lighthouse projects' as an example for the whole Union. An example could be a project to test in practice how the provision of early education or decent housing could better integrate children in poor areas.

Between two and four groups of eligible applicants will be identified, as will the action areas to be covered by the child guarantee scheme (education, childcare, healthcare, housing and nutrition) in a specific community (mainly municipalities). The scheme will cover those groups over a period of six to 12 months.

The outcome will be evaluated by a group of experts representing institutions, local authorities, agencies and other stakeholders, including civil society organisations. They will also examine the feasibility of a comprehensive or integrated approach the ultimate aim of which would be to extend the child guarantee scheme to all children.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

In the personal and household services sector (PHS), a sector with high potential for job creation, experience with implementing service voucher schemes, such as in France or Belgium, has been positive. Most workers in the PHS sector are women; however, 60% of them are migrants and many are cross-border workers, and consequently there are important loopholes and limited or fragmented access to information about the rights and obligations of workers in this sector. In Member States such as France and Belgium, a dedicated tax framework has been developed to regularise activities in the sector and address the issue of undeclared work. In order to increase the number of Member States applying a policy on PHS and to support decent work in this sector, the pilot project will have two main objectives: (1) to help Member States develop service voucher schemes (or in an initial phase trial them in certain municipalities; and (2) to introduce an effective social dialogue in this sector.

This pilot project will provide advice, technical assistance and a range of tailored guidance activities and recommendations to Member States interested in developing the PHS sector, and will support the exchange of good practices among key stakeholders, national public administrations (municipalities/local administrations in the case of a trial introduction) and organisations of domestic workers, carers and employers.

Regarding the social dialogue and decent working conditions, the project will facilitate the professionalisation of these jobs, the dissemination of information on the rights and obligations of workers and employers and the creation and development of an effective social dialogue.

This pilot project will need to be supported by the principal European stakeholders in the PHS sector.

Remarks

Differences between social groups on the basis of age, origin or income have been increasing in many European countries over the last few decades. Moreover, the economic crisis has accelerated certain macroeconomics trends and recovery has been uneven. Sluggish economic growth since the crisis has contributed to stagnant, or even falling, standards of living in many European households. Although inequality is predominately measured in terms of economic variables, such as earnings, income or wealth, there is a growing recognition that inequality is multidimensional and experienced across a number of life domains, such as health, physical security and participation. Oxfam Intermon and the London School of Economics, combining academic expertise with practitioner knowledge, have developed a systematic approach to conceptualising and measuring multidimensional inequality. Work will be conducted with the advisor support of Eurofound and other possible partners. The Multidimensional Inequality Framework (MIF) developed through that collaboration is theoretically grounded in Amartya Sen's capability approach and facilitates a systematic assessment of inequalities.

The MIF has been developed to allow for measurement of inequality between groups (age, gender, ethnicity, disability status, etc.), sometimes referred to as 'horizontal inequality' (e.g. inequality in the experience of physical violence or loneliness), and overall measures of inequality, sometimes referred to as 'vertical inequality' (e.g. inequality in educational attainment or wealth), which can also be expressed in terms of social gradients. Through the identification of drivers, the MIF also recognises the interconnections between dimensions; inequalities in one domain can be seen to drive inequalities in another.

The MIF offers European leaders a solid path not only to understand inequalities and their interconnections in seven life domains, but also to identify drivers and potential solutions to fight inequalities at Union level and in each Member State. The seven life domains around which the MIF is structured are:

(1) Life and health: Inequality in the capability to be alive and to live a healthy life;

(2) Personal safety and security: Inequality in the capability to live in physical safety and legal security;

(3) Education and learning: Inequality in the capability to be knowledgeable, to understand and reason, and to have the skills to participate in society;

(4) Financial security and dignified work: Inequality in the capability to achieve financial independence and security, enjoy dignified and fair work, and recognition of unpaid work and care;

(5) Comfortable, independent and secure living conditions: Inequality in the capability to enjoy comfortable, independent and secure living conditions;

(6) Participation, influence and voice: Inequality in the capability to participate in decision-making, have a voice and influence;

(7) Individual, family and social life: Inequality in the capability to enjoy individual, family and social life, to express yourself and to have self-respect.

The flexibility of the MIF means that it can be applied to a variety of situations: to assess current levels of inequalities, to make comparisons between countries, and to examine trends over time.

The pilot project will use this multidimensional approach to develop a rich understanding of inequalities and identify drivers and potential solutions for decision makers to take steps to reduce inequalities within the Union at three levels: (1) within the Union, treated as one population, (2) within each Member State, and (3) between Member States for a selected range of comparable inequality indicators. In the future it will be possible to examine trends over time and to assess the impact of macro-level shocks such as the financial crisis.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover the EGF so as to enable the Union to demonstrate solidarity towards, and to support workers made redundant and self-employed persons whose activity has ceased as a result of major structural changes in world patterns due to globalisation, as a result of the continuation of the global financial and economic crisis addressed in Regulation (EC) No 546/2009 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 18 June 2009 amending Regulation (EC) No 1927/2006 on establishing the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund (OJ L 167, 29.6.2009, p. 26), or as a result of a new global financial and economic crisis and to provide financial support for their rapid reintegration into sustainable employment.

The actions undertaken by the EGF should be complementary to those of the ESF and there must be no double funding from these instruments. EGF-supported actions or measures should aim to ensure that the largest possible number of beneficiaries participating in these actions find sustainable employment as soon as possible before the final report is due.

The rules for entering the appropriations in this reserve and for mobilising the EGF are laid down in point 13 of the Interinstitutional Agreement of 2 December 2013 between the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission on budgetary discipline, on cooperation in budgetary matters and on sound financial management (OJ C 373, 20.12.2013, p. 1).

For applications submitted between 1 May 2009 and 31 December 2011, it may also be used to provide support to workers made redundant as a direct result of the global financial and economic crisis.

Remarks

The FEAD replaces the European Union's Food Distribution Programme for the Most Deprived Persons of the Community, which was discontinued at the end of 2013.

To ensure continuity between the two programmes, expenditure shall be eligible for a support from a FEAD operational programme if it is incurred by a beneficiary and paid between 1 December 2013 and 31 December 2023.

The FEAD shall promote social cohesion, enhance social inclusion and therefore ultimately contribute to the objective of eradicating poverty in the Union by contributing to achieving the poverty reduction target of at least 20 million of the number of persons at risk of poverty and social exclusion in accordance with the Europe 2020 strategy, whilst complementing the Structural Funds. Since the proportion of women at risk of poverty or social exclusion is higher than is the case for men, FEAD will take a gender-sensitive approach by adapting measures to the groups actually at risk, including women and the elderly, migrants, and minorities (including marginalised communities such as the Roma). FEAD shall contribute to achieving the specific objective of alleviating and eradicating the worst forms of poverty, by providing non-financial assistance to the most deprived persons by food and/or basic material assistance, and social inclusion activities aiming at the social integration of the most deprived persons.

TITLE 04 — EMPLOYMENT, SOCIAL AFFAIRS AND INCLUSION

This objective and the results of the implementation of the FEAD shall be qualitatively and quantitatively assessed.

The FEAD shall complement and shall not replace or reduce sustainable national poverty eradication and social inclusion policies, which remain the responsibility of Member States.

The resources for the FEAD available for budgetary commitment for the 2014-2020 period shall be EUR 3 395 684 880 in 2011 prices.

Poverty is a multidimensional problem and tackling it should become a primary goal. Greater emphasis needs to be placed on poverty in all strategies, as poverty is a complex problem with many causes. Most importantly, it also has a great impact not only on the present but also on the future. People who experience poverty, especially children, are at greater risk of not succeeding in later life and of being excluded from society.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

This preparatory action prepares implementation of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) post-2020 and complements the previous Smart Eco Social Villages pilot project (2016) and the preparatory action 'Smart rural areas in the 21st century' (2018). It helps inform and improve the development and implementation of CAP strategic plans for which the notion of 'Smart Villages' is included in a result indicator. Complementing the pilot project on Smart Eco-Social Villages and the preparatory action 'Smart rural areas in the 21st century', this preparatory action provides knowledge, know-how and a framework methodology for developing support schemes for Smart Villages in a wider range of socio-economic contexts. It uses the lessons learned and knowledge obtained from initiatives provided for in the EU Action for Smart Villages (https://ec.europa.eu/agriculture/sites/agriculture/files/rural-development-2014-2020/looking-ahead/rur-dev-small-villages_en.pdf). As the new CAP is meant to increase subsidiarity, such work is a fundamental prerequisite for ensuring appropriate implementation of this aspect of rural development. The goal of the preparatory action is to implement successful practices in a number of Member States across the Union, including in the field of ICT and online methods such as the setting up of digital hubs and other good examples. It also sets up a network of sample villages (and people dealing with smart villages) in order to create a coherent methodological framework for Union support for Smart Villages. This concept is closely linked to the Digital Single Market, digital platforms, urban-rural links, the sharing and collaborative economy and the bioeconomy (innovation, precision farming, environmental management, renewable energies, supply chain, services, local food), improving quality of life, education and employment, taking account of the importance of women and young people. It could also help inform implementation of other ESI funds, in particular under the policy objective for local initiatives.

These goals are fully in line with the Cork Declaration 2.0, as well as the Bled declaration, which recognize the importance of enabling access to appropriate technologies and solutions, in order to deliver economic, social and environmental benefits.

The action focuses on developing a method to promote growth and jobs in rural areas through concrete actions on the basis of selected villages with common features — infrastructure, various resources, services, and access to markets — it develops methods for offering solutions in the fields of:

— the Digital Single Market,

— urban-rural links,

— the bioeconomy and circular economy (innovation, precision farming, environmental management, local renewable energies, supply chain, services, local food),

— sharing and collaborative economy (e.g. new rural mobility solutions such as car sharing and ride sharing; new paradigms in tourism; sharing and exchange of agricultural machinery and services),

— technology (e.g. the Internet of Things, big data collection, drones, electric vehicles, and next-generation mobile broadband connections),

— social aspects,

— new full-time and part-time jobs, which will expand in the types of economy referred to.

This preparatory action is well documented through online platforms in order to disseminate the results. As an important outcome, it provides lighthouse examples that will ensure better and more effective programming of Union funds in rural areas.

While Union legislation has been developed over the years to ensure sustainable use of pesticides, there are still many gaps in its implementation at Member State level and farmers say that replacing pesticides is difficult and costly or that alternatives do not exist.

Building on the findings of the recent Commission evaluation (COM(2017) 587 final), the study will assess integrated pest management (IPM) measures taken in each of the Member States, including farmland managed under IPM, and possibly classify them by type of crops. It will collect evidence of pesticide use reduction and gather information on the practices applied. The project will develop a toolbox to enable farmers and farmers' advisers to achieve the policy aim of significantly reducing pesticide dependency. The toolbox should describe, for a large number of crops, the protocols to be applied for IPM, including the alternatives to chemical pesticides. The study will identify and propose effective approaches, beginning with the modification of farming practices, using rotation wherever possible, followed by the introduction, where appropriate, of resilient and resistant crop varieties and the use of beneficial insects and alternative pesticides, etc. Alternatives should be tailored to local conditions.

The project will take into account inter alia the experiences gained from work done by the International Organisation for Biological Control (IOBC), the International Biocontrol Manufacturer Association (IBMA) and organisations working with farmers on different agronomic approaches and IPM.

The study will contain an analysis of how well common agricultural policy (CAP) tools are promoting IPM among farmers. It will also propose how to scale up practices throughout Europe, with the help of the post-2020 CAP instruments (e.g. farm advisory services informing farmers how to apply IPM) and the CAP green architecture to encourage farmers to apply the principles of IPM.

The study will also investigate the obstacles (real or perceived) seen by farmers and experts that limit dissemination and uptake of IPM in the field.

Article 14 of Directive 2009/128/EC on Sustainable Use of Pesticides (SUD) lays down that 'Member States shall take all necessary measures to promote low pesticide-input pest management, giving wherever possible priority to non-chemical methods, so that professional users of pesticides switch to practices and products with the lowest risk to human health and the environment among those available for the same pest problem.'

The Commission's evaluation of the implementation of the SUD (COM(2017) 587 final) states: 'Integrated Pest Management is a cornerstone of the Directive, and it is therefore of particular concern that Member States have not yet set clear targets and ensured their implementation, including for the more widespread use of land management techniques such as crop rotation.'

It also notes that 'Member States need to develop clearly defined criteria so that they can assess systematically whether the eight principles of IPM are implemented, and take appropriate enforcement measures if this is not the case. Such tools could confirm that the intended outcome of IPM as specified in the Directive, a reduction of the dependency on pesticide use, is being achieved.'

Both the Agriculture Council (on 6 November 2017) and the European Parliament (on 13 November 2017) have discussed the findings in the Commission's report and both have confirmed their commitment to ensuring deeper and meaningful implementation in the future.

This project will help farmers and Member States to begin applying IPM consistently, and reduce farmers' dependence on pesticides.

The pilot project will generate results that can be incorporated into the research project 'Stepping up integrated pest management' and can contribute to gathering information on how IPM is currently applied on the ground, and will be useful for Member States in designing their CAP plans.

Remarks

This pilot project will establish an operational programme that will create added value and be adapted to livestock sectors, particularly the milk and beef sectors, in order to deal with issues concerning local and family agriculture.

As with existing operational programmes in the fruit and vegetable sector, it aims to improve the structuring, competitiveness and resilience of these sectors by guaranteeing farmers a fair, stable income irrespective of the distribution of production, rising production costs and price fluctuations.

The pilot project is needed in order to counter the alarming reduction in the number of farms being handed on, which is putting local and family agriculture in jeopardy. Such small-scale farms have low profitability, which makes banks unwilling to support projects for handing on farms because of a lack of financial viability.

The pilot project has three main objectives:

Objective 1 — Structuring of the sector:

— increasing producers' level of organisation and strengthening their position in the interprofessional chain by financing projects to improve production planning;

— improving the quality, commercial exploitation and promotion of products through structured dialogue with those downstream of the sector;

— supporting the modernisation of businesses, fast product adaptation, innovation in production methods and crisis prevention;

05 08 77 18 (cont'd)

— supporting environmental protection measures and environmentally-friendly production methods (organic farming).

Objective 2 — Income stabilisation

Establishing a creative sectoral approach through the introduction of two tools available under the common agricultural policy:

— a contractual mechanism for sharing added value, and — the development of a financial stabilisation instrument for producer income.

The aim is to enable producers to overcome price volatility and be assured a fair, stable income which will boost the sustainability of their undertakings.

Objective 3 — Creation of a fund for future financing

Some of the added value created at sector level can be reinvested — alongside the public support received — in establishing an innovative fund to guarantee the long-term financing necessary for setting up or handing on farms.

— The approach adopted

The approach taken by the pilot project is to improve coherence between various European measures by establishing a sectoral operational programme. It follows the approach of more result-orientated public policies.

The project will strengthen the cohesion between the upstream and downstream parts of the sector and promote new synergies through structured dialogue between all components of the sector by enhancing production value by means of a list of specifications for optimising added value when products are placed on the market, the management of price volatility and guaranteeing supplies through generational renewal.

The sustainability of farms will no longer rely only on individual producers but on a common approach that will help create positive market momentum. The pilot project will therefore generate momentum, beyond the milk and meat sectors, which can be transferred to other local sectors as part of a region's collective economic development strategy.

It will act as a driver for regional development and for meeting challenges relating to the economy (breeder revenues and increased value of local products), society (job creation, making family farms sustainable), the environment (production conditions), land-use planning (handing on farms, territorial development) and tourism (short supply chains).

— Assessment

An assessment will be carried out after two years to determine:

(1) the added value and effectiveness of the sectoral operational programme in terms of the objectives;

CHAPTER 05 08 — POLICY STRATEGY AND COORDINATION OF THE 'AGRICULTURE AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT' POLICY AREA (cont'd)

(2) the interprofessional dynamics at work and their possible extension to other agri-food sectors in the area;

(3) the benefit of experience gained in coordinating CAP tools within an operational programme and the added value derived by small family farms from land facing similar problems;

(4) the relevance of sustaining the pilot project by means of a preparatory action with the aim of adopting a similar tool under the common agricultural policy.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to finance the participation of the Union at the universal Expo 'Feeding the Planet: Energy for Life', which was held in Milan in 2015.

This appropriation is intended to cover the baseline costs for the Union participation within the Italian Pavilion (rental of space, stand erection and decoration, running costs) as well as for the preparatory and initial stages of a basic scientific programme for the EXPO 2015 involving the compilation of baseline data for policy support purposes. The cost for organising events and exhibitions (e.g. reimbursement of expert costs, exhibition materials, etc.) will be covered by appropriations of the relevant specific programmes according to the policy area concerned.

Remarks

These remarks are applicable to all the budget lines in this chapter.

This appropriation is used for the Horizon 2020 — the framework programme for research and innovation which covers the 2014 to 2020 period.

Horizon 2020 shall play a central role in the implementation of the Europe 2020 flagship initiative 'Innovation Union' and other flagship initiatives, notably 'Resource-efficient Europe', 'An industrial policy for the globalisation era', and 'A digital agenda for Europe', as well as in the development and functioning of the European Research Area (ERA). Horizon 2020 shall contribute to building an economy based on knowledge and innovation across the whole Union by leveraging sufficient additional research, development and innovation funding.

It is carried out in order to pursue the general objectives set out in Article 179 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, in order to contribute to the creation of a society of knowledge, based on the ERA, i.e. supporting transnational cooperation at all levels throughout the Union, taking the dynamism, creativity and the excellence of European research to the limits of knowledge, strengthening human resources for research and for technology in Europe, quantitatively and qualitatively and research and innovation capacities in the whole of Europe and ensuring optimum use thereof.

In Horizon 2020, gender equality is addressed as a cross-cutting issue in order to rectify imbalances between women and men and to integrate a gender dimension in research and innovation content. Particular account is taken of the need to step up efforts to enhance the participation at all levels, including decision making, of women in research and innovation.

05 09 03 Societal challenges

Remarks

This priority of Horizon 2020 responds directly to the policy priorities and societal challenges identified in the Europe 2020 strategy. Those activities are implemented using a challenge-based approach which brings together resources and knowledge across different fields, technologies and disciplines. The activities cover the full cycle from research to market, with a new focus on innovation-related activities such as piloting, demonstration, test beds, support for public procurement, design, end-user driven innovation, social innovation and market take-up of innovations. The activities support directly the corresponding sectoral policy competences at Union level.

Remarks

The objective of 'Ensuring sustainable and efficient transport in the long run' refers to point (b) of Article 4(2) of Regulation (EU) No 1316/2013. This objective will be implemented through calls for proposals under the annual and multiannual work programmes constituting the financing decisions within the meaning of Article 110 of the Financial Regulation.

In the 2014-2020 period, a follow-up of the Marco Polo programme will be implemented by the Connecting Europe Facility within the framework of the revised TEN-T guidelines. In accordance with Article 32 of Regulation (EU) No 1315/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2013 on Union guidelines for the development of the trans-European transport network and repealing Decision No 661/2010/EU (OJ L 348, 20.12.2013, p. 1), it will introduce a new approach in support of freight transport services in the Union. It is important to optimise the use of transport infrastructure by shifting cargo to more sustainable modes, including inland waterways, and increase the efficiency of multimodal services. Digital CARGO-POOLING initiatives, for avoiding or reducing empty truck driving, as well as shared mobility projects in rural and urban areas, for encouraging people to be less dependent on private car ownership, should be supported.

The achievement of this objective will be measured by the number of inland and maritime ports and airports connected to the railway network, by the number of improved multimodal logistics platforms, by the number of improved connections through motorways of the sea and by the number of supply points in alternative sources of energy on the core network.

The implementation of the Single European Sky policy and the deployment of Single European Sky Air Traffic Management Research (SESAR) project are pursued under this objective.

Remarks

This objective of 'Creating an environment more conducive to private investment for transport infrastructure projects' aims to implement the projects of common interest through financial instruments, based on an ex ante assessment as required by Article 224 of Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No 1268/2012 of 29 October 2012 on the rules of application of Regulation (EU, Euratom) No 966/2012 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the financial rules applicable to the general budget of the Union (OJ L 362, 31.12.2012, p. 1). In accordance with Article 21(4) of Regulation (EU) No 1316/2013, from 10 % to 20 % of the financial envelope for CEF transport will be available for innovative financing instruments such as the Project Bonds Instrument, the Loan Guarantee Instrument and other instruments such as joint ventures and the equity instruments to combine public and private financial resources to accelerate infrastructure investments in Europe. The financial instruments are intended to facilitate access to private financing and thus to accelerate or to make possible financing of the TEN-T projects eligible under the TEN-T guidelines and Regulation (EU) No 1316/2013. The financial instruments are intended to be established as 'debt' or 'equity' frameworks and they should address specific market failures and provide appropriate financing solutions. They are intended to be implemented as direct management by the entrusted entities, within the meaning of the Financial Regulation or jointly with the entrusted entities. The entrusted entities must be accredited to provide guarantees to the Commission on the protection of the Union financial interests in line with the requirements of the Financial Regulation.

Any repayment from financial instruments pursuant to Article 209(3) of the Financial Regulation, including capital repayments, guarantees released, and repayment of the principal of loans, paid back to the Commission and entered in Item 6 4 1 1 of the statement of revenues may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with point (f) of Article 21(3) of the Financial Regulation.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover expenditure on studies and meetings of experts directly linked to the achievement of the objective of the programme or measures coming under this item, and any other expenditure on technical and administrative assistance not involving public authority tasks outsourced by the Commission under ad hoc service contracts.

It is intended to cover expenditure on information and communication, conferences and events promoting activities in the transport sector as well as social media activities, audio-visual products, development of website and other IT tools, consultancy activities, electronic and paper publications directly linked to the achievement of the objective of transport policy, including its social dimension, as well as safety and protection of transport users.

This appropriation is also intended to cover expenditure incurred by the Commission for collecting and processing information of all kinds needed for the analysis, definition, promotion, monitoring, evaluation and implementation of the Union's common transport policy, for all transport modes (road, rail, air, sea and inland waterways) and for all transport sectors (transport safety, internal market of transport with its implementation rules, optimisation of transport network, multimodality, logistics, passengers' rights and protection in all transport modes, the use of alternative fuels in all transport modes, clean vehicles procurement and urban mobility, social and gender aspects including employment data, as well as for all other sectors related to transport). The main endorsed actions and objectives are intended to support the Union's common transport policy, including extension to third countries, technical assistance for all transport modes and sectors, specific training, definition of rules of transport safety, simplification of administrative procedures, the use of ICT technologies, the contribution to the standardisation process, and promotion of the common transport policy including establishment and implementation of trans-European network orientation endorsed by the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union as well as strengthening passengers' rights and protection in all transport modes and to improve the application and enforcement of existing Regulations on passenger rights, in particular through awareness-raising activities about the content of those Regulations, targeted at both the transport industry as well as the travelling public.

Maritime transport and logistics

This appropriation is intended to cover the development and implementation of the Union's maritime transport strategy, in line with the objectives defined in the White Paper on the future of transport.

CHAPTER 06 02 — EUROPEAN TRANSPORT POLICY (cont'd)

06 02 05 (cont'd)

This includes analyses of economic and technological developments, support of international negotiations, developing and interpreting cabotage rules, following complaints and infringements procedures, development and implementation of actions to promote and support competitive and efficient short sea shipping, revision of Directive 2010/65/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 October 2010 on reporting formalities for ships arriving in and/or departing from ports of the Member States and repealing Directive 2002/6/EC (OJ L 283, 29.10.2010, p. 1) and administrative simplification and make use of ICT systems in the waterborne and logistic sector, as well as support of the sustainable development of the shipping sector.

This appropriation is intended to cover the development and implementation of a Union strategy for freight transport logistics, including the digital transport and logistics agenda, providing a framework and actions for interoperable multimodal transport information and management systems and related standardisation issues, administrative (European) single window(s) for multimodal transport, a single transport document and a multimodal liability regime.

This appropriation is also intended to cover the development of a reference framework on carbon footprint measurement, certification and reduction, modal shift policy including the outstanding actions under the former Marco Polo programme, Motorways of the Sea, multimodal and combined transport, digitalisation of the transport and logistics sector and supporting standardisation and harmonisation of equipment.

Maritime safety

This appropriation is intended to cover monitoring, evaluation and revision (impact assessment) of Union legislation on maritime safety, protecting the maritime environment and promoting qualifications and working conditions for seafarers.

Passenger rights

This appropriation is intended to cover expenditure on monitoring, evaluation, revision and raising awareness actions of Union legislation on passenger rights.

In connection with Regulation (EC) No 261/2004, the Commission needs to develop additional measures to make enforcement of that Regulation more efficient. The implementation of Regulation (EC) No 1107/2006 and Council Regulation (EC) No 2027/97 of 9 October 1997 on air carrier liability in the event of accidents (OJ L 285, 17.10.1997, p. 1) needs also to be ensured.

The implementation of Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 requires specific implementation action to ensure its correct application and enforcement in the Member States due to the complex interaction of regional, national and international (COTIF) administrative structures involved in the implementation.

The implementation of Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010 requires specific implementation actions to ensure its correct application and enforcement in the Member States and the compliance by Member States with their legal reporting obligations towards the Commission.

The implementation of Regulation (EU) No 181/2011 requires specific implementation actions in order to ensure its correct application and enforcement in the Member States and the compliance by Member States with their legal reporting obligations towards the Commission.

As an important implementation support measure the Commission conducts targeted actions covering some or all Member States to raise public awareness on passenger rights. Nearly one third of Union citizens are aware of their rights and obligations when buying a ticket to travel (31 %), although 59 % are said to be unaware of them (Eurobarometer on passenger rights 2014).

COMMISSION
TITLE 06 — MOBILITY AND TRANSPORT

06 02 05 (cont'd)

These actions and objectives could be supported at different levels (local, regional, national, European and international), for all transport modes and sectors and related to transport, as well as in technical, technological, regulatory, informative, environmental, climatic and political fields and for sustainable development.

Air transport has long been one of the sectors in which the consumer authorities receive most complaints in the Union. The increase in the number of commercial transactions performed electronically (using the internet or a mobile telephone) has merely resulted in more breaches of Union consumer legislation.

One of the main complaints by Union consumers is that there are no effective means of redress at airports themselves, particularly when disputes arise as a result of failure on the part of airlines and other service providers to meet their obligations. Union consumers and air transport authorities therefore need to work together to secure an immediate improvement in passenger support and information facilities at airports and, at the same time, step up co-regulation in the sector.

Road safety

The Commission communication of 20 July 2010 entitled 'Towards a European road safety area: policy orientations on road safety 2011-2020' (COM(2010) 389 final) presents seven objectives: road user education, enforcement of traffic rules, safe infrastructure, safe vehicles, use of modern technology, post-injury emergency responses and a special focus on vulnerable road users. Work continues on the Commission's proposal, on the regular update of the Union law on driving licences, and on the revision of the rules on qualification and training for professional drivers, on the follow-up to the Directives 2014/45/EU, 2014/46/EU and 2014/47/EU, as well as towards a strategy on serious road traffic injuries. The Commission's road safety work also includes the management of the European Road Safety Charter, the management of rules relating to the transport of dangerous goods, the maintenance of a European database on road accidents — Community Road Accident Database (CARE), the follow-up on the infrastructure management and tunnel safety directives and on various aspects of vulnerable road user safety. The implementation of the policy orientations 2011-2020 also requires specific implementation action for the exchange of good practices, road safety campaigns, calls for proposals and development of the road safety observatory; as well as the evaluations of options for making the road safety in the Union work more effectively and efficiently in the future.

This appropriation is also intended to cover expenditure on communication activities and on public events such as the annual European Road Safety Day and similar awareness-raising and citizen interaction initiatives.

It is also intended to establish efficient cross-border cooperation between Member States concerning the enforcement of road safety related traffic offences.

Land transport

The main activities in the land transport area concern the implementation and review of existing policies, enhancing sectoral cooperation and the planning of new initiatives. Among others, this includes activities in areas such as infrastructure charging, market access, social rules (including their enforcement), technical rules, safety rules and international aspects (land transport relations with third countries and international organisations dealing with land transport issues). All these activities require close cooperation with stakeholders.

Rail market

The full implementation of the Directive 2012/34/EU and Regulation (EU) No 913/2010 are key priorities to encourage competitiveness of railways. The legislation aims to open rail markets, improve the interoperability and safety of rail services and thus encourage the development of integrated rail system leading to a Single European Rail Area. In addition, the Commission services are reinforcing international transport cooperation on railway policy.

Encouraging sectoral cooperation is essential for effective implementation of Union rail legislation. Directive 2012/34/EU provides for the creation of the European Network of Rail Regulatory Bodies (ENRRB) and of the European Network of Infrastructure Managers (Platform of Rail Infrastructure Managers in Europe, PRIME). Informal cooperation frameworks have been established for railway undertakings (RUs) to share experience at Union level (RU Dialogue) and Ministries (Rail Directors Meetings). Equally, cooperation with third countries (the Gulf countries, China, Iran, Japan, Brazil, etc.) is important part of promoting Union's rail industry worldwide.

In this context, this appropriation is intended to cover the initiatives and the work of cooperation platforms that contribute to timely implementation of Single European Rail Area and addressing its future developments and international cooperation.

Ports and inland navigation

This appropriation is intended to cover development, monitoring, evaluation and revision (impact assessment) of Union legislation and policy on ports and inland navigation.

Single European Sky

The full implementation of the Single European Sky (four basic Regulations (EC) No 549/2004, (EC) No 550/2004, (EC) No 551/2004 and (EC) No 552/2004, and more than 20 implementing rules) is a key priority to improve the performance of the air navigation services in terms of safety, cost efficiency of the air navigation service provision, reduction of air traffic flow delays and environmental performance, and hence of air transport in Europe.

Implementing the Single European Sky and Single European Sky Air Traffic Management Research (SESAR) project, its technological pillar with the assistance of the SESAR Joint Undertaking, the SESAR Deployment Manager and the European Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) are also priorities in the Union's Aviation Strategy adopted in 2015.

The implementation of the performance scheme of the Single European Sky with the assistance of the Performance Review Body (PRB) is pursued under this article, with the assistance of EASA and Eurocontrol.

In this context, promoting the Single European Sky and the initiatives that contribute to its timely implementation, including through the involvement and consultation of stakeholders (Industry Consultation Body, National Supervisory Authorities Coordinating Platform and European Group on the Human Dimension), as well as addressing its future development are also important activities for the Commission and are pursued under this article.

Aviation safety, environment and cooperation with the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO)

The use of several legislative tools are important to ensure the safety of European Aviation to ensure the achievement of an environmentally sustainable growth and protect Union citizens when travelling outside of the Union.

COMMISSION

06 02 05 (cont'd)

According to Articles 3 to 5 of Regulation (EC) No 2111/2005, the Commission may impose total bans or partial restrictions on air carriers from third countries coming to the Union. In that context and in accordance with Article 3(4) of Regulation (EC) No 473/2006, the Commission, the European Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) and experts from the Member States may carry out assessment missions to conduct on-the-spot checks and to identify safety deficiencies of the air carriers and the authorities responsible for their oversight. The cost of on-site assessment visits for national experts needs to be reimbursed by the Union.

There is a clear need to complement these missions with more positive and preventive actions as well as with ex post technical cooperation to assist the countries concerned by the ban or restrictions to correct the deficiencies. In addition, the Commission and EASA have as their objective the promotion of the highest standards of aviation safety across the world.

In this context, the large-scale Union projects in the area of civil aviation cooperation managed by other Directorates-General (NEAR, DEVCO and FPI), which can only be implemented on a long-term basis, do not provide an immediate answer to short-term needs.

The objective of this initiative is therefore to complement the existing instruments by establishing a flexible tool to implement ad hoc preventive and assistance (corrective) actions in favour of the national authorities responsible for the oversight of air carriers affected by the Union ban within the Union. The actions envisaged are small-scale and short-term activities.

Since the framework service contract concluded between EASA and MOVE in 2009 proved to be an effective and efficient tool to carry out technical assistance, the contract with EASA was renewed for the period 2013-2016 and a new framework contract is under preparation for the period 2017-2020.

In addition, Regulation (EU) No 996/2010 provides for the establishment of a European Network of Civil Aviation Safety Investigation Authorities (Encasia). Encasia is required to develop actions in order to further improve the quality of investigations conducted by safety investigation authorities and to enhance accident prevention in the Union. According to that Regulation, the Commission is associated with Encasia's work and needs to provide Encasia with the necessary support.

Finally, the Memorandum of Cooperation between the Union and International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) covers areas of aviation for which both the Commission and the ICAO have responsibilities (i.e. safety, environment, air traffic management and aviation security). This strengthened cooperation will ensure the indispensable participation in and contribution to ICAO initiatives in several key aviation policy areas which are being pursued at the global level. This includes the initiative to strengthen the safety of international aviation on a worldwide basis, or the development and implementation of measures with regard to the environmental impact of aviation which are acceptable worldwide. It aims to ensure that Union interests (including of an industrial nature, for example in the area of the definition of worldwide technical standards) are better taken into consideration by ICAO. Through the agreement, ICAO will also be brought to accept, support and enhance the increasingly important role which regional organisations play in the current and future development of international aviation.

Sustainable and intelligent transport, including in urban areas

This appropriation is intended to support policy and strategy development and implementation, as well as the implementation of Directives and the related delegated and implementing acts.

06 02 05 (cont'd)

Social issues

This appropriation is intended to cover horizontal social issues. To reduce the risk of labour shortages, it will support actions aiming at attracting more workers to the transport sector, bearing in mind the effects of automation (a third of transport workers are over 50 years old). It will also support actions bringing more gender balance to the sector (transport remains male dominated with only 22 % of female workers and less than 3%, in technical positions).

Youth mobility

This appropriation is intended to implement actions related to the mobility of young people in order to reinforce their knowledge and appreciation of other Union cultures by encouraging them to travel in a multi-modal, sustainable way. To this end, the Commission will, among other actions, promote travelling schemes and related campaigning actions and web portals.

TITLE 06 — MOBILITY AND TRANSPORT

This pilot project will address the lack of attention given by the Union to behaviour in connection with autonomous driving. Much research has been conducted in recent years into autonomous driving, both by car manufacturers and by the research community. It has mainly focused on the technological aspects of autonomous driving, i.e. interoperability of vehicles, interaction with road infrastructure, data security, data reliability, data protection and liability, etc.

The pilot project will provide a new area for studies and research that puts the emphasis on driver behaviour, which has been somewhat neglected both by policy makers and by the industry. It will provide the Commission and the legislative authority with a complementary view of the interaction of human behaviour with autonomous driving with a view to addressing potential problems arising from the large-scale introduction of autonomous driving in the Union in order to make it a success and improve road safety.

The pilot project will gather information from the research community on road safety in order to address the following areas:

— the human factor in new autonomous driving; opinions and views of professional/frequent/occasional drivers, broken down by age and other relevant criteria (country, gender, etc.);

— identifying and proposing solutions to address 'resistance' by the driver community to the introduction of autonomous vehicles;

— the training needs of drivers in connection with new autonomous forms of driving; need for additional/specific/less certification for self-drivers (compulsory training, additional requirements to obtain a driving licence, voluntary schemes, etc.);

— interaction between autonomous and traditional drivers; attitudes of drivers and other road users towards autonomous drivers and ways of alerting other road users to autonomous driving.

Legal basis

Pilot project within the meaning of Article 58(2) of Regulation (EU, Euratom) 2018/1046 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 18 July 2018 on the financial rules applicable to the general budget of the Union, amending Regulations (EU) No 1296/2013, (EU) No 1301/2013, (EU) No 1303/2013, (EU) No 1304/2013, (EU) No 1309/2013, (EU) No 1316/2013, (EU) No 223/2014, (EU) No 283/2014, and Decision No 541/2014/EU and repealing Regulation (EU, Euratom) No 966/2012 (OJ L 193, 30.7.2018, p. 1).

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

The Union is committed to halving the number of fatal road accidents by 2020. Cross-European enforcement operations supported by information and awareness campaigns could help to achieve this goal. Therefore a coordinated pan-European enforcement event should take place across the TEN-T network and Member States should sign up to it.

The Commission will therefore fund a one-month coordinated operation across the TEN-T network. European police operations in Member States should be coordinated. As more than half of all fatal accidents occur on rural roads, the event could take place in rural areas and be supported by targeted campaigns to raise awareness. It should be focused on the main killer: speed.

Legal basis

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

This pilot project will reduce odometer fraud by facilitating odometer information exchange in the Union.

It will include an assessment, a feasibility study and a technical business analysis to identify and explore solutions and define the scope for a future odometer information exchange system in the Union. It will provide support for roadworthiness certification in connection with Directive 2014/45/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 3 April 2014 on periodic roadworthiness tests for motor vehicles and their trailers and repealing Directive 2009/40/EC (OJ L 127, 29.4.2014, p. 51).

TITLE 06 — MOBILITY AND TRANSPORT

Recent studies show that in major European markets for used cars one-third of all vehicles have had their odometers manipulated. The average value of the fraud is roughly EUR 3 000, with central budget revenue losses estimated at between EUR 5 600 000 000 and EUR 9 600 000 000 a year. New vehicles are mainly checked and serviced at official dealerships as a condition of warranty. Dealerships keep records of odometer readings, but this information is not publicly accessible. New vehicles do not undergo roadworthiness testing until they are four years old. During the subsequent annual inspections, odometer readings are transmitted to databases in the Member States but are not exchanged. When a vehicle changes hands or is sold abroad, there is a break in the odometer track record, presenting the opportunity for tampering with odometer readings. It is becoming increasingly easy to do this with a minimum of investment in software, knowledge and time.

The target group includes consumers, tax and revenue authorities and car retailers.

The pilot project is supported by the Fédération Internationale de l'Automobile and the European Consumer Organisation BEUC.

The tachograph, which has been mandatory since 1985, is the cornerstone of road transport legislation, in particular for monitoring vehicle speed, distance travelled and driver work and rest times. Over the years, as the technology has progressed, successive generations of tachograph have incorporated new features which have gradually made the controls and fraud prevention more effective. The latest 'smart tachograph' is expected to provide real-time information by connecting satellite navigation systems and enforcement authorities.

According to a study commissioned by the European Parliament in 2018, retrofitting smart tachographs in all heavy-duty vehicles by 2020 is estimated to cost between EUR 6 400 000 000 and EUR 15 900 000 000 just for the purchase of the device and the labour associated with the retrofit.

Given the widespread use of smartphones and the continuous expansion of their functions, as well as the deployment of Galileo and the opportunities it offers in terms of real-time localisation, which many mobiles already use, the pilot project will explore the possibility of developing and certifying a mobile application offering the same benefits as the smart tachograph, and the associated costs.

The feasibility study will be structured as follows:

(1) Identifying, in accordance with the revised Regulation (EU) 165/2014 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 4 February 2014 on tachographs in road transport, repealing Council Regulation (EEC) No 3821/85 on recording equipment in road transport and amending Regulation (EC) No 561/2006 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the harmonisation of certain social legislation relating to road transport (OJ L 60, 28.2.2014, p. 1), which data the application should collect so as to function as a smart tachograph;

(2) Assessing the technical feasibility of an application to collect this data, possibly using Galileo or by means of a direct connection with the vehicle, and the technical requirements for real-time transmission of the data to the authorities;

(3) Assessing the risk of fraud and the potential cybersecurity threat connected with the application;

(4) Assessing the hardware and software security measures to be implemented in the smartphone in order to mitigate the risks identified in point 3;

(5) Providing an estimate of the cost of developing and certifying such an application;

Remarks

These remarks are applicable to all the budget lines in this chapter.

These appropriations are intended to be used for Horizon 2020 — the framework programme for research and innovation, which covers the 2014 to 2020 period, and for the completion of the previous research programmes (seventh framework programme and preceding framework programmes).

Horizon 2020 will play a central role in the implementation of the Europe 2020 flagship initiative 'Innovation Union' and other flagship initiatives, notably 'Resource-efficient Europe', 'An industrial policy for the globalisation era', and 'A digital agenda for Europe', as well as in the development and functioning of the European Research Area. Horizon 2020 will contribute to building an economy based on knowledge and innovation across the whole Union by leveraging sufficient additional research, development and innovation funding. The programme will be carried out in order to pursue the general objectives described in Article 179 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, in order to contribute to the creation of a society of knowledge, based on the European research area, i.e. supporting transnational cooperation at all levels throughout the Union, taking the dynamism, creativity and the excellence of European research to the limits of knowledge, strengthening human resources for research and for technology in Europe, quantitatively and qualitatively and research and innovation capacities in the whole of Europe and ensuring optimum use thereof.

In Horizon 2020, gender equality is addressed as a cross-cutting issue in order to rectify imbalances between women and men and to integrate a gender dimension in research and innovation content. Particular account will be taken of the need to step up efforts to enhance the participation at all levels, including decision making, of women in research and innovation.

Also entered against these articles and items are the costs of high-level scientific and technological meetings, conferences, workshops and seminars of European interest organised by the Commission, the funding of high-level scientific and technological analyses and evaluations carried out on behalf of the Union to investigate new areas of research suitable for Union action, inter alia, in the context of the European research area, and measures to monitor and disseminate the results of the programmes, including measures under previous framework programmes.

These appropriations are intended to be used in accordance with Regulation (EU) No 1290/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2013 laying down the rules for participation and dissemination in 'Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation (2014-2020)' and repealing Regulation (EC) No 1906/2006 (OJ L 347, 20.12.2013, p. 81).

CHAPTER 06 03 — HORIZON 2020 — RESEARCH AND INNOVATION RELATED TO TRANSPORT (cont'd)

The contributions from the EFTA States pursuant to the Agreement on the European Economic Area, and in particular Article 82 thereof and Protocol 32 thereto, must be added to the appropriations entered in this chapter. By way of information, these amounts derive from contributions from the EFTA States entered against Article 6 3 0 of the statement of revenue, which constitute assigned revenue in accordance with points (b), (e) and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation; they give rise to the provision of corresponding appropriations and to implementation under the 'European Economic Area' Annex to this part of the statement of expenditure in this section, which forms an integral part of the general budget of the Union.

The possibility of third countries or institutes from third countries taking part in European cooperation in the field of scientific and technical research is envisaged for some of these projects. Any financial contribution will be entered in Items 6 0 1 3 and 6 0 1 5 of the statement of revenue and may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Revenue from States taking part in the European cooperation in the field of scientific and technical research will be entered in Item 6 0 1 6 of the of the statement of revenue and may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Any revenue from the contributions from candidate countries and, if applicable, the Western Balkan potential candidates for participating in Union programmes entered in Item 6 0 3 1 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with points (b), (e) and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation.

Any revenue from the contribution by outside bodies to Union activities will be entered in Item 6 0 3 3 of the statement of revenue and may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Additional appropriations will be made available under Item 06 03 50 01.

Administrative appropriations of this chapter will be provided under Article 06 01 05.

06 03 03 Societal challenges

Remarks

This priority of Horizon 2020 responds directly to the policy priorities and societal challenges identified in the Europe 2020 strategy. Those activities will be implemented using a challenge-based approach which brings together resources and knowledge across different fields, technologies and disciplines. The activities will cover the full cycle from research to market, with a new focus on innovation-related activities such as piloting, demonstration, test beds, support for public procurement, design, end-user driven innovation, social innovation and market take-up of innovations. The activities will support directly the corresponding sectoral policy competences at Union level.

Funding will be focused on the following challenges:

— smart, green and integrated transport,

— innovation and research, particularly in the areas of behavioural change, modal shift, accessibility for all, integration (interconnectivity, intermodality, interoperability) and sustainability (climate change, gas and noise emission reduction), which are of crucial importance for the transport and tourism sectors.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover research and innovation actions that should substantially contribute to shifting transport into a new era of smart mobility. Actions under this item should support the development and take-up of the necessary solutions for all transport modes, drastically reducing transport emissions that are harmful to the environment, lowering the dependence of transport on fossil fuels, and hence reducing transport impact on biodiversity and preserve natural resources. This is expected to be achieved by investing in specific activities, particularly in the form of large public-private partnerships, such as making aircraft, trains, vehicles and vessels cleaner and quieter, developing smart equipment, infrastructure and services and improving transport and mobility in urban areas.

Research and innovation carried under this item is expected to make important contributions to optimise performance and efficiency in the face of growing demands for mobility. Actions under this item will also focus on substantially reducing traffic congestion, substantially improving the mobility of people and freight, developing and applying new concepts of freight transport and logistics and reducing accident rates and fatal casualties and improving security. Actions under this item are indeed intended to contribute to making Europe the safest region for aviation and to move towards the target of zero fatalities in road transport by 2050.

Research and innovation is expected to play a significant role in achieving global leadership for the European transport industry and contributing to the development of small and medium-sized enterprises, staying ahead in new technologies and reducing the costs of existing manufacturing processes, therefore contributing to economic growth and highly skilled jobs in the European transport industry. In this context, actions to develop the next generation of transport means and explore entirely new transport concepts are expected to be developed and covered by this appropriation.

Socioeconomic research and forward-looking activities for policymaking will also be covered by this appropriation: actions to support policy analysis and development including on socioeconomic aspects of transport are necessary to promote innovation and meet the challenges raised by transport.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

This pilot project will create a representative butterfly (Lepidoptera) monitoring network across the Union and a suite of Lepidoptera indicators, thus helping to improve the targeting and efficiency of conservation measures under Council Directive 92/43/EEC of 21 May 1992 on the conservation of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora (OJ L 206, 22.7.1992, p. 7) (the Habitats Directive), and also monitor the biodiversity impact of the greening of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP), ensuring payments to farmers for maintaining Natura 2000 areas in good condition, climate change and European sectoral and land use policies in general.

Rationale

(1) The pilot project will develop a suite of Union Lepidoptera indicators which can help improve conservation measures and assess progress in implementing Union policies and legislation such as the Union Biodiversity Strategy to 2020 and the Habitats Directive. Besides providing a highly relevant indicator for measuring progress in terms of managing and restoring Natura 2000 sites, it will also contribute to monitoring progress on Target 3 of the Union Biodiversity Strategy, which aims to increase the contribution of agriculture and forestry to maintaining and enhancing biodiversity. In particular, the pilot project will deliver a representative indicator to help monitor the impact of the CAP on grassland biodiversity. It will also provide data to produce a climate change indicator, thereby contributing to the ongoing revision of climate change adaptation strategies. Indicators will also be possible for woodland, wetland and urban habitats.

(2) Such indicators are needed for tracking and stimulating progress towards the Union and global headline biodiversity target for 2020 and the Sustainable Development Goals. The project is highly policy-relevant and can provide several benefits at Union level, such as linking science and policy and strengthening the evidence and knowledge base for Union policy-making; linking the efforts of citizens and volunteers with policy makers in Member States where this has not been a tradition; increasing professional opportunities for young people across Europe and increasing their skills; and linking knowledge across the environment and agriculture sectors, and involving climate change researchers and policy makers.

(3) It can help to raise the profile of biodiversity and the importance of agricultural policy and practice to biodiversity recovery and contribute to the ongoing discussion on innovative agro-ecology approaches, paving the way for sustainable innovation in agriculture and measuring the effectiveness of payments for greening and sustainability improvement. Currently, agricultural Natura 2000 areas have the lowest conservation status; this project can further assist with improving the implementation of the Habitats Directive and stimulating further actions to improve the conservation status of Natura 2000 Lepidoptera and the habitats on which they depend, specifically by enabling better targeting of CAP pillar 2 funds and ensuring that Natura 2000 payments are effective and sufficient so that farmers are better incentivised to protect the areas and the species they support. It will complement the existing farmland birds indicators as it will be more sensitive in describing what high habitat quality means and the condition of ecosystems. Moreover, it replaces an ad hoc approach to Lepidoptera monitoring and indicator reporting with a sustainable system that covers more Member States, has more records and is more representative, in order for it to be more widely accepted.

(4) This coherent project will enable the development of a system for collecting and recording validated Lepidoptera data at European level so as to allow cost-effective and regular updating of a grassland butterfly indicator and other indicators. This will be a significant improvement on the current approach. It involves the development and construction of a well-designed database with processes for collating systematic records of Lepidoptera numbers along a fixed route or transect (a methodology already agreed with European Environment Agency (EEA)) from more countries and a process for regularly compiling and updating a suite of Lepidoptera indicators.

(5) The project will enable new monitoring schemes to be set up in some Member States where there is none at present and contribute to building capacity. This will involve, inter alia, finding citizen volunteers, training them, giving them some support and enabling them to report their findings cost-effectively. Validation and quality control can be effectively achieved in those Member States with modest support for knowledgeable part-time coordinators. This will increase opportunities and skills for young people.

(6) As a result of this project we will have a greatly improved Union network for monitoring lepidopterans, more transects walked each year, more Member States and more citizens involved in monitoring, and a suite of Lepidoptera indicators and a comprehensive database that can provide a valuable resource for researchers, policy makers and evaluators. Results will be used to inform policy debates, improve policy implementation and raise the profile of biodiversity and ecosystem services, including pollination services.

Main tasks of the project

Objective 1

Constructing a unified, high-quality database and automated data entry system.

Expected results

A unified database of validated and standardised Lepidoptera counts from across searchable European monitoring schemes producing regular reports on Lepidoptera indicators and enriching research, which will directly contribute to the integrated spatial data infrastructure for natural capital developed by the EEA, the Joint Research Centre, Eurostat and DG Environment.

Main activities:

— producing an effective database for Lepidoptera monitoring records which can produce a suite of Lepidoptera indicators;

— establishing legal data sharing agreements with existing monitoring schemes to clarify intellectual property rights and rights of access to data;

— gathering data annually from existing monitoring schemes, validating counts and populating databases;

— developing an online data entry system and allowing countries to submit data efficiently and in a standard format (NB: some existing schemes are also adopting such a system);

— providing training for monitoring scheme volunteers in using the online data entry system;

— providing tools for calculating national Lepidoptera population trends;

— making the records available for research as appropriate.

Objective 2

Supporting and developing a unified, sustainable and cost-effective European monitoring network based on trained volunteer recorders, supported by new coordinators, together with local access to the online data recording system.

Expected results:

— Volunteer-based and expert-validated Lepidoptera monitoring schemes in most European countries, reporting high-quality data to central databases and providing input for national records.

— Increased opportunities for young people to become involved in a European-level project of practical value and policy importance, increasing their skills and employability and creating new jobs requiring coordination, data management and people skills and professional knowledge.

Activities:

— ensuring that existing Lepidoptera monitoring schemes contribute data to the central database: Belgium, Spain, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Slovenia, Sweden and the UK;

— supporting further development and improving the quality and sustainability of a number of existing and fledgling schemes, especially by adding transects, improving frequency of recording and recruiting more volunteers and supporting coordinators (e.g. in France, Slovenia, Estonia, Lithuania and Spain);

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

This pilot project will unlock the potential of satellite imagery to support the operation of the Natura 2000 network of protected areas in the Union. It will use available satellites images to better understand and tackle the threats to protected areas stemming from habitat loss. Halting biodiversity loss by 2020 is the headline target of the Union Biodiversity Strategy, and an essential step to achieve this target is to ensure that current protected areas are protected and managed adequately.

Under Directive 2009/147/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 30 November 2009 on the conservation of wild birds (OJ L 20, 26.1.2010, p. 7) (the Birds Directive) and Council Directive 92/43/EEC of 21 May 1992 on the conservation of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora (OJ L 206, 22.7.1992, p. 7) (the Habitats Directive), Member States are obliged to protect Natura 2000 sites from destruction. However, in practice thousands of hectares of habitat (forests, grasslands) are lost in Natura 2000 sites every year due to a variety of factors, such as water abstraction and drainage, conversion of natural grassland into cropland, clear-cutting of forest and urbanisation, which were identified in the European Environment Agency's 2015 'State of Nature in the EU' report as key threats to biodiversity. Although habitat loss is poorly monitored, it probably varies greatly in nature and extent across the Union. Habitat loss is a very severe environmental problem, as either it is often irreversible or habitats can sometimes take centuries to recover (for example, old-growth forests).

Satellite technology is rapidly developing. The Union's Copernicus and other satellites, such as the freely available LANDSAT, are able to provide high-resolution images of the whole of Europe, with archives spanning several decades. However, much work is needed before the images can be used, and this is what is urgently needed at the moment.

First the satellite images will need to be processed. In order to understand how much habitat has been lost, and when, several images of the same area in different years will need to be aligned and further processed. The images will then be converted into habitat maps, preferably using MAES ecosystem types, and verified using existing maps and other data. The significant areas of habitat lost in Natura 2000 sites will then be analysed and estimates of habitat loss per ecosystem type over time will be compiled.

The maps will then be presented on an online platform accompanied by identified cases of past habitat loss, illustrating the drivers behind it. Citizens and civil society organisations are very active in scrutinising the operation of the Natura 2000 network, as is evident in the many complaints that the Commission receives every year about threats to Natura 2000 sites. By providing an online platform where habitat loss can be tracked, the project will empower them and encourage their involvement in the application of Union policy. The platform should be user friendly, with downloadable data, as this will enable citizens and scientists to use the project results to the fullest.

Ultimately, the project will contribute to land use in Natura 2000 areas that is compatible with conserving biodiversity, and contribute to resolving conflicts over land use. As such, the project will contribute to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals, in particular SDG 15 on sustainable forest management, halting and reversing land degradation and halting biodiversity loss.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

γ-HCH, commonly known as Lindane, was widely used from the early 1940s as an insecticide in agriculture, in households and in wood and textile protection.

Its agricultural use began to be restricted in the 1970s due to concerns over its effects on human health and the environment and it was finally banned in the Union in 2000. Finally in 2009, the production and agricultural use of Lindane was also banned internationally under the Stockholm Convention on persistent organic pollutants. Lindane can harm the nervous system, producing a range of symptoms from headache and dizziness to seizures, convulsions and, more rarely, death. Based primarily on evidence from animal studies, most evaluations of Lindane have concluded that it may cause cancer.

Although Lindane has been banned as a crop pesticide since 2000, old production and dumping sites for this highly toxic pesticide still exist throughout the Union (e.g. in Slovenia, Germany, Romania and Spain), and while there is extensive knowledge about other persistent organic pollutants (POPs) there is no clear picture of the scale of Lindane-contaminated sites in the Union, and the volume of HCH which can enter the waste/water regime via contaminated construction and demolition waste from historical production and storage sites is unknown. Lindane may also evaporate and affect human health by inhalation. According to several reports produced by the European Parliament and the United Nations, high concentrations of Lindane can be found in a number of Member States (France, Portugal, Spain, the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany, Italy and Luxembourg).

Although the Union has a comprehensive legal framework as regards POP production and waste management and a fairly well developed system for authorising or reauthorising the introduction of new pesticides, there are no rules or remedies in connection with existing Lindane sites, decontamination techniques and the regeneration of industrial sites. There is also a variety of techniques, ranging from sealed confinement to incineration and chemical reaction and the use of genetically modified plants.

National, regional and local authorities sometimes are given no assistance with addressing negative effects on the environment and health as regards decontaminating industrial production sites, including a lack of Union funding possibilities. In order to deal with this and taking into account the new Union opportunities under the circular economy proposals, this pilot project has the following objectives:

(1) identifying and mapping Lindane waste sites in the Union and cataloguing the actions taken by the various administrations to decontaminate Lindane waste sites and to assess the effectiveness of the actions carried out and the public investments made. This project will identify the strengths and weaknesses of POP and other pesticide decontamination as part of the endocrine disruptors debate;

(2) facilitating the exchange of knowledge, best practices and technological transfer involved in HCH and Lindane decontamination actions throughout the Union so that this knowledge can be transferred to other regions with similar problems. This project will also disseminate the results of specific actions financed under previous LIFE and Horizon 2020 projects;

(3) identifying possible additional Union funding for decontamination of sites in the Union and best practices in connection with projects to regenerate former industrial sites, in particular specific projects to be financed under the European Fund for Strategic Investments (EFSI) in close cooperation with the EFSI hub;

(4) identifying research needs for developing further additional methods for more efficient and safe HCH and Lindane waste decontamination;

(5) drawing up guidelines on a sustainable and environmentally-friendly approach to site redevelopment for regional/national/local administrations.

This pilot project was supported by the European Parliament and Council in 2017 and was allocated EUR 600 000 in commitment appropriations in the 2018 budget. This figure is significantly increased in 2019 to respond to the needs of the project and the interest it has raised among national, regional, local and Union institutions.

Building on the successful 2015 pilot project (operational in 2016-17) entitled 'Capacity building, programmatic development, and communication in the field of environmental taxation and budgetary reform' and the five thematic areas defined within that project (biodiversity and land use; air pollution; water stress; water quality; and the circular economy) to develop best practices in the field of environmental taxes, this preparatory action provides the necessary tools for organisations to become better prepared to participate in policy-making processes at both national and Union level.

It has four pillars:

(1) developing capacity-building toolkits for civil society actors and decision-makers at local, regional, national and European levels to provide guidance for participating in environmental taxation reforms;

(2) mapping out windows of opportunity across the five thematic areas for stakeholder engagement, and developing roadmaps for potential stakeholder actions relating to environmental reforms until 2030, both at European level and in a sample of Member States (e.g. three per thematic area);

(3) organising strategic meetings relating to the five thematic areas to refine the roadmaps and promote the involvement of decision makers and civil society actors in the field of environmental taxation and budgetary reform;

(4) looking into various types of subsidies where reforms would be important for greening the economy, including grants, tax exemptions (e.g. corporate taxes) and subsidised loans, together with modelling analysis for issues such as optimum design and compensation for those who lose out as a result of subsidy reform.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

On 22 October 2014, the European Parliament and the Council adopted Regulation (EU) No 1143/2014 (the 'IAS Regulation'), according to which 'invasive alien species' (IAS) means an 'alien species whose introduction or spread has been found to threaten or adversely impact upon biodiversity and related ecosystem services'.

IAS are one of the major causes of biodiversity loss. Stricter control of IAS is one of the six main targets of the Union Biodiversity Strategy adopted by the Commission in May 2011 and applicable until 2020. IAS can also cause significant harm to human health and the economy. The cost to the European economy is estimated to be at least EUR 12 billion per year.

The IAS Regulation introduces a Union-wide system to tackle this issue. As provided for by Article 4 of that Regulation, on 13 July 2016 the Commission adopted a list of IAS of Union concern (the 'Union List'). This is the list of priority species which require Union action to prevent, minimise or mitigate their adverse impacts. Member States need to carry out the following measures with regard to species on the list: (1) prevention, (2) early detection and rapid eradication of new invasions, and (3) management of invasions that are already widely spread.

The control and management of IAS on the Union List can impact large numbers of animals for sustained periods of time, thereby raising concerns for animal welfare, reflecting increasing public concern that invasive alien animals are sentient beings and, more generally, increasing civil society interest in the humane treatment of animals.

As clearly stated in the IAS Regulation, non-lethal methods can be used for the management of species: 'Member States and any operator involved in the eradication, control or containment of invasive alien species should take the necessary measures to spare avoidable pain, distress and suffering of animals during the process […]. Non-lethal methods should be considered'.

However, it is up to the Member States to select measures 'appropriate to the local conditions'. Non-lethal and humane methods are rarely used because they are poorly developed and are not well known in Europe.

This pilot project, in line with the strategic approach identified by the IAS Regulation, will address the needs of Member States to apply effective, safe and humane methods to manage IAS and prevent them spreading more widely by using humane measures as a viable and publicly acceptable method of controlling the size and growth of IAS populations.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

This pilot project will establish an urban air quality sensor network (PM, NO_2, CO, BC) and implement enhanced quality assessment and control (QA/QC) strategies to collect reliable output data from that network. The network will consist of both fixed and portable sensors.

A sensor network will improve the availability of data on local air quality and on human exposure to pollutants because of the higher spatial and temporal resolution than traditional measurement systems (monitoring stations). However, because of the lower accuracy of air quality sensors advanced QA/QC strategies need to be implemented.

This research project will develop and implement online calibration procedures for individual air quality sensors. The unique hybrid approach of combining high-resolution modelling with high-resolution monitoring will also be demonstrated to improve the QA/QC procedures and eventually make the network output data more reliable. Furthermore, network optimisation procedures will be developed and implemented to guarantee maximum network performance.

Selected sensors will be tested and calibration algorithms will be set. Sensor performance before deployment (e.g. development of sensor calibration models), as well as methods that are applied to follow up sensor performance through the deployment phase, will be demonstrated. In addition, network and power supply issues will be tackled too.

The project will also include combining or assimilating the Internet of Things (IoT) sensor network and air quality modelling applications. The model chain can provide the air quality sensor network with an independent source of information to identify faulty sensor nodes or aid in providing a calibration framework. In addition, the abundance of data from a sensor network will reveal shortcomings in the modelling and result in better exposure assessment.

Former Item 34 02 77 04

This appropriation is intended to cover commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the pilot project.

This pilot project demonstrates nature-based solutions (constructed wetlands/retention ponds) for mitigating the impact of climate change and human land use on water quantity (droughts and floods) and quality (nutrients, pesticides) in agricultural regions. The water cycle is under pressure in agricultural regions, while agricultural practices depend on the availability of water. Therefore the focus of this project is on solutions that mitigate problems of water availability for rural and agricultural users, while also minimising the impact of agricultural practices on the downstream catchments. Research questions are the following:

— How can nature-based solutions help mitigate hydrological events such as floods and droughts at the farm scale?

— How can these nature-based solutions help mitigate hydrological events at the catchment scale?

— How do these solutions contribute to decreasing water pollution from agricultural areas, such as nutrients, pesticides, sediments and heavy metals?

— What are the total economic costs and benefits of the proposed solutions? What are the other ecosystem services related to these nature-based solutions and which policy/governmental measures have to be taken to exploit them?

CHAPTER 07 02 — ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY AT UNION AND INTERNATIONAL LEVEL (cont'd)

This project selected three pilot study regions. In each region, collaboration arrangements have been set up with local agriculture research agencies that implement the nature-based solutions in existing monitored agricultural areas (discharge and pollution of first/second order streams). Modelling is based on the combined data from the piloting sites.

— Demonstrating pilot types: For each region, four prototypes (12 in total) of retention ponds/constructed wetlands are constructed, with variations in size and outflow mechanisms and in position/catchment size. Water quantity and quality is monitored at the outlet and at the existing monitoring stations on first or second order streams. In order to take into account seasonal effects, monitoring should at least cover one year, with potential for follow-up monitoring beyond the project's lifetime.

— Modelling study: Results from pilot prototypes are extrapolated to an entire catchment through hydrological modelling. Influence on quantity (floods, base flow) and quality (nutrients, pesticides, pollutants, sediment) of water is assessed at the watershed scale. Modelling is based on existing models, although additional calibration and validation is required. Modelling results should focus on the required densities to achieve a good status at the catchment scale.

— Economic viability: On the basis of a combination of the demonstration and modelling result, the economic viability of the different prototypes is assessed. Costs and benefits will be quantified, and mechanisms to compensate for the additional ecosystem services is evaluated.

The development plans are based on regional cost-benefit analyses and economic tools, including the cost of water resilience plans. The solutions prevent water cycle pollution and avoid pollution through water discharge. The benefits are compared to alternative or complementary options. The selection of pilots and regions takes into account relevant Interreg and other Union projects.

Remarks

In recent years, more and more Union cities and regions have introduced low-emission zone (LEZ) policies for vehicles. Many LEZ policies are based on the Euro classification or the year of vehicle type-approval. LEZ policies generally have three implementation problems:

Firstly, LEZ policies based solely on Euro classification or type-approval date have questionable environmental effectiveness. Testing by independent parties shows that the most polluting Euro 6 diesels have higher NOx emission levels than some Euro 4 or 5 vehicles.

Vehicle emissions tests using PEMS (emission analytics) or remote sensing (CONOX programme) show that Euro 5 and pre-RDE Euro 6 vehicles are still emitting significantly more NOx under normal conditions than indicated by the laboratory tests. Only since Euro 6d (from 1 September 2017 onwards), has the RDE test been used for type-approval of new vehicles. This is expected to significantly reduce the discrepancy between type-approved and real-world emissions.

Secondly, for European motorists driving in different cities and/or Member States the various LEZ restrictions and urban access policies create an increasingly confusing and possibly costly situation, with motorists having to comply with different rules and needing to acquire different stickers or permits for each zone.

Thirdly, depending on how the LEZ policies are designed and implemented, cities find it difficult to ensure compliance of vehicles registered in other Member States.

A possible solution to these problems is the development of an ultra-low polluting vehicle (ULPV) scheme which identifies vehicles having good performance in terms of NOx emissions (and possibly other pollutants). Such a scheme would allow Member States, regions and cities to develop and fine-tune LEZ restrictions beyond the Euro classifications and type-approval date. The ULPV scheme could provide Member States, regions and cities with access to a harmonised system.

The pilot project has the following goals:

(1) to assess options for a ULPV scheme (including the possibility of a label) for cars that meet Euro 6 ELV requirements under normal use, tested with PEMS in an RDE test, and also including those tested during type-approval (Euro 6d-TEMP or later) or certified to that level after retrofit;

(2) to assess options for the certification and monitoring of such vehicles;

(3) to assess options for the establishment of a European information exchange system (e.g. linked to the Eucaris exchange platform) including a database with all registered ULPV cars. Remarks

The European Chemicals Agency (ECHA) and the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) provide independent scientific advice to decision makers to regulate chemical and food safety in Europe. Through their respective mandates, they collect large volumes of scientific data on substances and their hazardous properties. At the same time, industry and the academic research community are creating a wealth of information on such topics as well.

However, due to legal, technical, resource-related or other constraints, these vast scientific data collections are not always fully shared or made accessible to a wider audience and have thus not yet achieved their full potential. Therefore, ECHA and EFSA are looking to increase and simplify access to the vast scientific data collections they hold, enriched with other public data and data fed by external sources.

That could be achieved through a portal including both structured and unstructured data provided by regulatory agencies, industry, academia and other parties with an interest in chemical safety. The portal should uniquely identify studies and support critical appraisal of studies, text mining, data visualisation, analysis and knowledge sharing.

The goal is to facilitate seamless sharing of data between authorities and provide public access to researchers, regulators, industry and the public at large. This will promote: (a) transparency and trust in Union decision making, (b) research and data analytics, (c) innovation, (d) less animal testing and more predictive toxicology, and (e) better regulatory decision making and informed consumer choices.

A common portal could provide:

— a registry of toxicological studies for chemical substances and regulated products. Industry-sponsored studies are available for regulatory assessment by the respective authority, but they are currently not always available to other authorities, industrial actors, the research community or the public at large,

— a repository for research and scientific data. Peer-reviewed studies are not always used to the extent that they could be in regulatory assessments, since searching for, and gaining access to, studies is resource-demanding. Scientists as well as publishers of their studies lack the fundamental interest to share data with a view to addressing regulatory questions, — a platform for data analytics, predictive toxicology (i.e. avoidance of animal testing), better environmental monitoring, better study design, development of artificial intelligence and machine learning applications,

The pilot project will take the form of a feasibility study exploring the opportunities for such a common platform to deliver valuable benefits to the four identified key stakeholder groups (regulators, academia, industry and the public at large).

The first phase of the study will focus on feasibility analysis and the development of use cases. The following research questions will have to be tackled:

— regulators, academia, industry and citizens are identified as the key stakeholders but what will be their roles and how will they benefit from the common portal?

— can we learn from existing systems, e.g. EU Clinical Trials Register, the US Environmental Protection Agency's Master Record Identifiers system, the EU Open Data Portal, IPCheM, OECD eChemPortal, a potential future OECD global chemicals knowledge base, ECHA Dissemination Portal, OpenAire, and the European Open Science Cloud? Could any of these systems provide some or all of the portal functionalities?

— how can data owners share information but maintain their intellectual property rights and protection of confidential business information/trade secrets?

— how can participants be persuaded to use a common international structured data format for information exchange?

— can information exchange be automated with laboratory systems sharing information via web services?

— how can quality control processes and critical appraisal tools be integrated within the platform?

— what could be the incentives for participation in the portal?

— how could a common platform stimulate new or improved studies and methods for chemical safety assessment?

— how could a common platform inform the Union research agenda?

07 02 77 50 (cont'd)

The second phase of the study will develop recommendations for the Union legislative authority and for Union policy development in this area on the basis of the opportunities and threats identified.

— what basic provisions will be needed to govern a central Union platform across regulations and Union institutions?

— what are the legal barriers and can legislation act as a driver for participation and imposing a common format for delivering results?

— what would be the resource requirements for adaptation/development and maintenance of a common portal?

— what are the funding options for the adaptation/development and maintenance of a common portal?

If judged appropriate, implementation of the pilot project can be delegated to the agencies.

Remarks

Bringing nature into cities and greening our neighbourhoods is one of the most underexploited ways of increasing European citizens' quality of life. Today, 72 % of Europeans live in cities, towns and suburbs, and the urban share of the population continues to grow. As cities face an array of challenges, ranging from their impact on residents' health to environmental concerns, green infrastructure has huge potential to offer solutions to many of these problems.

The goal is to present greening as a way of solving problems and to make the value of greening better understood. It is increasingly important to look ahead and develop a vision of the cities of tomorrow where green infrastructure plays a crucial role.

TITLE 07 — ENVIRONMENT

A further goal is to increase scientific knowledge and improve knowledge sharing, tools, methods and innovative approaches to enhance biodiversity and the planning and implementing of green infrastructure (including green roofs and walls and sustainable urban agriculture) in cities and improve civil society participation in decision-making. This also extends to building a vision of the green city of tomorrow together.

A truly participatory approach involves policymakers, citizens and civil society, including the elderly and children. Each of those stakeholders has different needs (recreation, mitigation of urban heat island impacts, improvement of air quality, improved human health, sustainable soft mobility, improved social cohesion, etc.). Therefore, the scientific component of the project could help to develop the scientific solutions needed to support local initiatives which enhance urban green infrastructure, benefiting those people who live in cities and improving their quality of life.

This pilot project will create and collect material, best practices and guidelines and distribute the material created to the cities, municipalities and administrators so as to help mayors start projects to improve and expand green infrastructure in cities and urban areas.

The aims of this pilot project are:

(1) to raise awareness of the benefits of green spaces in the built environment;

(2) to increase the quantity and quality of research and development for new innovations;

(3) to encourage citizens to take action to improve their own neighbourhoods;

(4) to foster a culture of appreciation of the green spaces;

(5) to increase the number of green infrastructure projects;

(6) to connect up existing initiatives and share best practices across the Member States;

(7) to create a roadmap for greening European cities by 2030;

(8) to prepare for the European Year of Greener Cities 2020.

Remarks

This project will pilot novel methods to prevent the establishment and spread of invasive alien species (IAS) in the Union in support of Regulation (EU) No 1143/2014 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 22 October 2014 on the prevention and management of the introduction and spread of invasive alien species (OJ L 317, 4.11.2014, p. 35) and Target 5 of the Union's 2020 Biodiversity Strategy.

It is widely recognised that preventing invasive alien species from becoming established (i.e. effective IAS biosecurity measures) is far more cost-effective than managing and eradicating IAS once they become established. However, two significant barriers have been identified which prevent effective IAS biosecurity measures from being implemented: i) a lack of understanding by stakeholders of the importance of IAS biosecurity, and ii) a lack of understanding among natural resource managers and regulators of how to communicate the need for effective IAS biosecurity measures across various stakeholder groups.

This pilot project will introduce a series of activities which seek to: i) improve understanding among stakeholders of the importance of effective IAS biosecurity measures, and ii) improve communication among managers, regulators and stakeholders with regard to developing and implementing effective IAS biosecurity measures.

With a view to becoming a preparatory action, the pilot project will provide funding to raise awareness of the need for effective biosecurity measures across the following stakeholder groups: farmers, landowners and land managers, environmental NGOs, the horticulture industry, the exotic pet trade, recreational freshwater users (anglers and boaters), marine users (recreational boating and industrial shipping), transport infrastructure authorities (canals, railway sidings, motorway verges) and local authorities. These stakeholder groups have been identified as representing the most significant pathways for IAS in Europe.

IAS biosecurity is an issue which stakeholders generally poorly understand, but at the same time is a source of great anxiety owing to the perceived negative impact on their interests. The pilot project will build a platform to facilitate constructive communication within and between sectors on the need for, and benefits of, effective IAS biosecurity measures, as well as to share best practice for the communication, development and implementation of such measures.

Specifically, the pilot project will appoint officers to begin and lead a dialogue within each of the identified stakeholder groups. As the existing level of understanding among many stakeholder groups about IAS biosecurity issues is low, officers will initially determine the level of understanding and concern within each stakeholder group. Once the perception of each stakeholder group has been determined, officers will then launch a series of events, workshops and conferences, and produce accessible sector-specific material, to promote understanding and the exchange of knowledge about the issue within each sector. A secretariat will manage and oversee the work of the officers, as well as collate and develop sector-specific dialogues to identify common problems and common solutions across sectors.

As a result of these activities, the level of concern, conflict and misunderstanding around IAS biosecurity is expected to fall. What is new about this project is that it is proactive, as there have been no previous attempts to constructively engage specific sectors at pan-European level on IAS biosecurity, and collaborative, as it simultaneously addresses IAS biosecurity across related but different European sectors.

RESEARCH AND INNOVATION

Remarks

These remarks apply to all the budget lines in this title.

Research and innovation activities under this title will contribute to two main research programmes, i.e. Horizon 2020 and Euratom. It will also cover research programmes of the Research Fund for Coal and Steel.

It will be carried out in order to pursue the general objectives set out in Article 179 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, in order to contribute to the creation of a society of knowledge, based on the European Research Area, i.e. supporting transnational cooperation at all levels throughout the Union, taking the dynamism, creativity and the excellence of European research to the limits of knowledge, strengthening human resources for research and for technology in Europe, quantitatively and qualitatively, and research and innovation capacities in the whole of Europe and ensuring optimum use thereof.

In Horizon 2020, gender equality is addressed as a cross-cutting issue in order to rectify imbalances between women and men and to integrate a gender dimension in research and innovation content. Particular account will be taken of the need to step up efforts to enhance the participation at all levels, including decision making, of women in research and innovation.

Also entered against these articles and items are the costs of high-level scientific and technological meetings, conferences, workshops and seminars of European interest organised by the Commission, the funding of high-level scientific and technological analyses and evaluations carried out on behalf of the Union to investigate new areas of research suitable for Union action, inter alia, in the context of the European Research Area, and measures to monitor and disseminate the results of the programmes, including measures under previous framework programmes.

These appropriations are also intended to cover administrative expenditure, including expenditure on staff, whether covered by the Staff Regulations or not, information, publications, administrative and technical operation, and certain other expenditure items relating to internal infrastructure linked with the achievement of the objective of the measure of which they form an integral part, including the action and initiatives necessary for preparation and monitoring of the Union's strategy on research, technological development and demonstration (RTD).

Revenue resulting from the cooperation agreement between the European Atomic Energy Community and Switzerland will be entered in Item 6 0 1 1 of the statement of revenue and may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Any revenue from the contribution by outside bodies to Union activities will be entered in Item 6 0 3 3 of the statement of revenue and may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21 of the Financial Regulation.

Additional appropriations will be made available under Items 08 02 50 01, 08 03 50 01 and 08 04 50 01.

Administrative appropriations of this title will be provided under Article 08 01 05.

Remarks

These budgetary remarks are applicable to all the budget lines in this chapter.

This appropriation will be used for Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation, which covers the 2014-2020 period and brings together all existing Union research and innovation funding, including the framework programme for research, the innovation related activities of the competitiveness and innovation framework programme and the European Institute of Innovation and Technology (EIT). The programme shall play a central role in the implementation of the Europe 2020 flagship initiative 'Innovation Union' and other flagship initiatives, notably 'A digital agenda for Europe' 'Resource-efficient Europe' and 'An industrial policy for the globalisation era', as well as in the development and functioning of the European Research Area (ERA). Horizon 2020 shall contribute to building an economy based on knowledge and innovation across the whole Union by leveraging sufficient additional research, development and innovation funding. This appropriation will be used also for the completion of the previous research programmes (Seventh Framework Programme and preceding framework programmes).

This appropriation will be used in accordance with the Regulation (EU) No 1290/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2013 laying down the rules for the participation and dissemination in 'Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation (2014-2020)' and repealing Regulation (EC) No 1906/2006 (OJ L 347, 20.12.2013, p. 81).

Remarks

The aim of this activity is to help companies and other types of organisation engaged in research and innovation (R & I) to gain easier access, via financial instruments, to loans, guarantees, counter-guarantees and hybrid, mezzanine and equity finance. Debt and equity facilities will be run in a demand-driven manner, though the priorities of particular sectors or of other Union programmes will be targeted if top-up funding is made available. The focus is on attracting private investments into R & I. The European Investment Bank (EIB) and the European Investment Fund (EIF) will play an important role, as entrusted entities, in implementing each financial instrument facility on behalf of and in partnership with the Commission. Part of this appropriation will be used to reinforce, in the form of paid-in capital, the EIF's capital base.

Revenues and repayment from financial instruments, paid back to the Commission and entered in Item 6 4 1 0 and 6 4 1 1 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with Article 21(5) of the Financial Regulation.

Remarks

To support the participation of SMEs in Horizon 2020 a dedicated market-oriented instrument has been introduced, targeting all types of innovative SMEs that wish to develop, grow and internationalise. In addition, support will be provided to research intensive SMEs in transnational research projects and to women-led start-ups. Activities enhancing the innovation capacity of SMEs and improving the framework conditions for innovation will also be supported.

In accordance with Regulation (EU) No 1291/2013, support will be provided to innovation in SMEs through the implementation of an SME instrument under a single management system and implemented in a bottom-up manner. In accordance with Annex II to that Regulation within the target of allocating a minimum of 20 % of the total combined budgets for the specific objective 'Leadership in enabling and industrial technologies' and the priority 'Societal challenges' for SMEs, a minimum of 5 % of those combined budgets will be initially allocated to the dedicated SME instrument. A minimum of 7 % of the total budgets of the specific objective 'Leadership in enabling and industrial technologies' and the priority 'Societal challenges' will be allocated to the dedicated SME instrument averaged over the duration of Horizon 2020.

Remarks

This priority of Horizon 2020 responds directly to the policy priorities and societal challenges identified in the Europe 2020 strategy. Those activities will be implemented using a challenge-based approach which brings together resources and knowledge across different fields, technologies and disciplines. The activities will cover the full cycle from research to market, with a new focus on innovation-related activities such as piloting, demonstration, test beds, support for public procurement, design, end-user driven innovation, social innovation and market take-up of innovations. The activities will support directly the corresponding sectoral policy competences at Union level and take a gender-sensitive approach while aiming for balanced participation of men and women.

Remarks

Lifelong health and well-being for all, high-quality and economically sustainable health and care systems, with health care becoming more personalised for more efficacy, and opportunities for new jobs and growth in the health sector and its related industries are the aims of this activity. To that respect activities will focus on effective health promotion and disease prevention (e.g. understanding the determinants of health, developing better preventive vaccines). Particular attention will be paid to gender- and age-related health specificities. In addition, emphasis will be placed on managing, treating and curing disease (notably via an increased personalisation of medicine), disability and reduced functionality (e.g. by transferring knowledge to clinical practice and scalable innovation actions, better use of health data, independent and assisted living). Furthermore, efforts will be made to improve decision-making in prevention and treatment provision, identify and support the dissemination of best practice in the health care sector, and support integrated care and the uptake of technological, organisational and social innovations empowering in particular older persons as well as disabled persons to remain active and independent. Finally, activities will be based on a gender-sensitive approach that recognises, amongst other things, the position of women in both the informal and the formal care sector.

Remarks

The Commission invests in biomedical research and development through its Horizon 2020 Research Framework Programme under Societal Challenge 1 on health, demographic change and wellbeing, the primary objective of which is 'improving the lifelong health and well-being of all'. However, the Commission's biomedical research and development policy has been criticised for failing to ensure a fair public return on its investments: both the Council conclusions of 17 June 2016 on strengthening the balance in the pharmaceutical systems in the EU and its Member States and the European Parliament resolution of 2 March 2017 on EU options for improving access to medicines (Texts adopted, P8-TA(2017)0061)) have stressed the need to ensure that public investments in research and development yield a fair return to ensure that the medical innovations supported by public investment focus on public health interests and the unmet medical needs of patients.

In order to ensure that public biomedical investments in research and development deliver the above-mentioned objectives of Horizon 2020 and ensure a fair return, it is crucial that a corresponding monitoring mechanism to measure the socio-economic impact be put in place. However, it is widely acknowledged that there is a huge time lag (estimated 17 years) before health research evidence reaches clinical practice, let alone generates measurable health impacts. It is therefore of the utmost importance to define what the notion of a 'fair return on public investment' implies for Union biomedical investments, especially for Union-financed public-private partnerships, in terms of directly observable/measurable indicators. With such benchmarks and metrics to quantify 'fair return' developed, the social impact of medical research and development projects would be considered at the stage where the projects are being scoped out and decisions are being made on the allocation of resources, which in turn would help to ensure the desired social impact of Union medical research and development projects and guarantee a fair return on public investments.

This pilot project seeks to address the above-mentioned concerns of the European public and Union institutions by creating a 'fair return' benchmark. With actual health impacts decades away and adequate monitoring mechanisms not yet in place, a benchmark for a 'fair return' on the Union's public investment is urgently needed. To that effect, this benchmark will define what a 'fair' public return for the Union's public investments implies for:

— priority allocation of research and development funding,

— the design of projects, including the expected health and other socio-economic impacts.

Remarks

The Euratom research and training programme (2014-2018) ('Euratom Programme') complements Horizon 2020 in the field of nuclear research and training. Its general objective is to pursue nuclear research and training activities with an emphasis on continually improving nuclear safety and radiation protection, notably to contribute to the long-term decarbonisation of the energy system in a safe, efficient and secure way. By supporting this research, the Euratom Programme shall reinforce outcomes under the three priorities of Horizon 2020: excellent science, industrial leadership, and societal challenges.

The indirect actions of the Euratom Programme are focused on two areas: nuclear fission, safety and radiation protection, and fusion research and development programme.

Any revenue from the contributions from candidate countries and, if applicable, the Western Balkan potential candidates for participating in Union programmes entered in Item 6 0 3 1 of the statement of revenue may give rise to the provision of additional appropriations in accordance with points (b), (e) and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation.

08 03 01 Operational expenditure for the Euratom Programme

Remarks

The scope of the Euratom Programme for indirect actions includes nuclear fission safety and radiation protection as well as the fusion research and development which aim to ensure the success of the ITER project while enabling Europe to reap its benefits. It will reinforce outcomes under the three priorities of Horizon 2020: excellent science, industrial leadership and societal challenges.

The Euratom activity in the field of nuclear fission will provide support to joint research activities concerning the safe operation of reactor systems in use or which may be used in the future in the Union. It will also contribute to the development of solutions for the management of ultimate nuclear waste. In addition, the activity will support joint and/or coordinated research activities, placing emphasis on the risks from low doses from industrial, medical or environmental exposure. Furthermore, Euratom fission will promote joint training and mobility activities between research centres and industry as well as between different Member and Associated States while it will provide support for maintaining multidisciplinary nuclear competences.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to cover payments in respect of commitments remaining to be settled from previous years.

The programme covers two thematic areas:

Fusion research, which includes activities that range from basic research to technology development, construction of major projects and training and education activities. It offers the prospect of an almost limitless supply of clean energy, with ITER being the crucial next step in the progress towards this ultimate goal. The realisation of the ITER project therefore lies at the heart of the present Union strategy. It must be accompanied by a strong and focused European research and development programme on fusion to prepare for the exploitation of ITER and to develop the technologies and knowledge base that will be needed during ITER operation and beyond.

Fission research, which aims to establish a sound scientific and technical basis in order to accelerate practical developments for the safer management of long-lived radioactive waste, to promote safer, more resource-efficient and cost-effective nuclear energy and to ensure a robust and socially acceptable system of protection of man and the environment against the effects of radiation.

Remarks

The Research Fund for Coal and Steel funds every year innovative projects to enhance the safety, efficiency and competitive edge of the Union coal and steel industries. It was created in 2002 to build on the successes of the European Coal and Steel Community. The distribution of the budgets between coal (27,2 %) and steel (72,8 %) is defined in Council Decision 2003/76/EC of 1 February 2003 establishing the measures necessary for the implementation of the Protocol, annexed to the Treaty establishing the European Community, on the financial consequences of the expiry of the ECSC Treaty and on the Research Fund for Coal and Steel (OJ L 29, 5.2.2003, p. 22).

Remarks

The coal research programme activity aims to reduce the total costs of mining production, improve the quality of the products and reduce the costs of using coal. Research projects shall also aim to achieve scientific and technological progress with a view to gaining a better understanding of the behaviour and control of deposits in relation to rock pressure, gas emissions, the risk of explosion, ventilation and all other factors affecting mining operations. Research projects with these objectives shall present the prospect of results applicable in the short or medium term to a substantial part of Union production.

Remarks

This pilot project will provide financial support for Union research into the most promising and environmentally friendly steelmaking technology which could almost completely eliminate CO_2 emissions by replacing carbon with hydrogen, and by capturing, storing and processing any remaining CO_2 produced through more advanced and cost-efficient standard industrial techniques, and by deploying cutting-edge bio-industrial technologies, such as bio-sequestration and integrated CO_2 bio-refineries. This holistic approach seeks to achieve zero CO_2 emissions in steel production by maximising the complementarity of advanced versions of these technologies.

The first step – identifying technical barriers for upscaling carbon direct avoidance techniques (via hydrogen and electric steelmaking) and smart carbon usage (via process integration and carbon capture utilisation) – has been initiated under the Research Fund for Coal and Steel (RFCS) as a feasibility study which may lead in 2020 to a wider European innovation initiative.

This pilot project will explore synergies between the RFCS, Horizon 2020, the EU Innovation Fund (Climate), the Fuel Cells and Hydrogen Joint Undertaking (FCH-JU) and the Bio-Based Industries Joint Undertaking (BBI-JU), as well as other relevant Union funding instruments in order to promote the establishment of an industrial steelmaking pilot plant with zero CO_2 emissions and its potential linkage to an integrated CO_2 bio-refinery.

Legal basis

Pilot project within the meaning of Article 58(2) of Regulation (EU, Euratom) 2018/1046 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 18 July 2018 on the financial rules applicable to the general budget of the Union, amending Regulations (EU) No 1296/2013, (EU) No 1301/2013, (EU) No 1303/2013, (EU) No 1304/2013, (EU) No 1309/2013, (EU) No 1316/2013, (EU) No 223/2014, (EU) No 283/2014, and Decision No 541/2014/EU and repealing Regulation (EU, Euratom) No 966/2012 (OJ L 193, 30.7.2018, p. 1).

In order to protect media freedom and pluralism and to promote professionalism in journalistic content, the project will improve understanding of the consequences and challenges of digital developments through a press council forum, and in parallel support the transition of media self-regulatory bodies to the online world and engage them in discussions with internet intermediaries and internet media stakeholders.

Suggested activities:

— conduct a survey to provide an in-depth examination of the state and models of media self-regulation in the digital environment, to bring clarity on how to achieve, in a converged media environment, the traditional goals of media regulation (i.e. a pluralistic and diverse media landscape in which the media benefit from independence from political, commercial and other influences and are accountable to the public),

— compile the first online database on the current functioning of media self-regulatory bodies and promote the work of press councils in Europe,

— develop a pan-Union working group on the digital challenges to applying the recommendations of the survey,

— provide direct support to newly established press councils in Europe,

— include press/media councils in a global dialogue on media ethics in the digital age (participation at global internet conferences etc.),

— organise regular meetings with internet intermediaries with the objective of achieving online recognition of media content already under the supervision of a press council.

Legal basis

Remarks

Supporting promising media professionals to support democracy

Democracy requires quality news, and quality media needs innovation to survive economically and address online disinformation and low-quality news coverage recently witnessed. As platforms dominate, the risk increases of a 'post-truth' era where online mis-/disinformation, political polarisation and populism prosper. This risk will increase in the run-up to the 2019 European elections.

In fact, outside broadcasting, which is largely publicly funded, the number of journalists and news outlets is shrinking. Subsidising endangered models is not the solution. Innovation requires cross-border cooperation, mobility and faster careers for promising newcomers.

Spreading knowledge and skills through an exchange programme for media professionals

Participants from selected pairs will spend one to three months at each other's base, and be involved in initial training and debriefing / follow-ups, ensuring cooperation for nearly a year within each 'thematic wave'. The thematic waves will be set up in cooperation with relevant media associations, in order to match like-minded media and quality ideas. Thematic waves of exchanges will be organised by subsector (business media, centre-right, centre-left, liberal, green, non-commercial or community-based radio stations, etc.), by innovation area (data journalism, light video, mobile, etc.) or by editorial approach or topic (e.g. investigation, European elections, migration, development, etc.).

Young professionals — communication, marketing and IT professionals, i.e. not only journalists — are paired between like-minded media from different countries, and work at each other's media on joint project ideas. As media professionals are more mobile, innovative and credible when they have 5 to 10 years of work experience, the core target group are 25- to 30-year-old professionals on average.

The project will not focus solely on mobility of media professionals, content exchanges and journalism quality. It will also promote media innovation and sustainable business models. Moreover, it will involve a 'reciprocal exchange' of journalists and other media professionals, with all participating media both hosting and sending candidates. This ensures quality training and maximises the 'return on investment' for media outlets sharing staff.

The pilot project will be organised around thematic waves. A process has been suggested for media independence, impact for participants and effectiveness. A steering committee will be set up and involve media stakeholders. It will help ensure quality control of the project and allow partners to learn from the results of the first year before setting priorities for the second. In order to ensure editorial reach and business innovation, this pilot project originates with media professionals, who should make up the bulk of the project steering committee membership.

This pilot project will bridge the gap between initial training and large R&D projects. It will pioneer skill sector programmes envisaged under the MFF after 2020. Extracts from the Commission communication on how to tackle disinformation indicate: 'Under the next MFF, the Commission will propose to scale up initiatives to support media freedom and pluralism, quality news media and journalism, including skills, collaboration, monitoring, data-driven platforms, new technologies, and training for journalists'.

Year 2 — Building on experience

Building on the first year of implementation, the renewed project will enhance and extend the pilot project's activities. Additional financing is therefore requested to ensure continuity and achievement of the project's main goals.

In particular, the project will focus in its second year on increasing the number of participants and on adding new thematic waves. Outreach effort will be increased in order to increase the project's attractiveness among participating media and media professionals.

The project will take into account recent Union policy developments, notably initiatives to tackle misinformation and disinformation, as well as a possible European strategy for the media sector for 2019-2024, all leading to more sustainable media. This pilot project also fits in with the latest policy needs reinforced by the focus on online disinformation:

(1) stronger sector orientation of skill programmes is envisaged for the MFF after 2020, complementing initial education programmes such as Erasmus Plus and Erasmus Pro and not affecting their budgets;

(2) the digital single market until now has only been horizontal: a further review of it could lead to 'vertical' media sector initiatives;

(3) the media sector is addressed by the Union chiefly as a communications channel or as an area for press freedom issues, and not really as an economic sector in crisis. This pilot project will test a concept suited for a strategic industry in crisis, with low risks and high impact. This fits in with the Commission draft communication on how to tackle disinformation: 'There is a need to take action to further support Europe's quality media in the digital environment, reinforce the key societal and democratic role of quality journalism, and encourage quality news media to explore innovative forms of journalism';

(4) finally this project takes into account the results of the Commission's earlier feasibility study on 'ERASMUS for Journalists' (2011).

Media professionals call for continuation of the pilot project

The project is widely called for by the media. The rationale for this proposal is indeed based on interviews with 30 editors and publishers in the #Media4EU series, as well as the results of the first year of the pilot project. All this translates into strong support in media and political circles (the project's findings and support list are available). 50 media, experts and associations already back this proposal, as well as a number of MEP's from several groups. To ensure innovation: independence and effectiveness principles should be respected.

Based on these interviews, several elements have been taken into account: previous attempts based chiefly on exchanging content, training journalists, and external benchmarking. This project focuses on sustainable media innovations, not just coverage of European topics. Indeed, several ways of helping media coverage exist at European level, but they are typically not sustainable once the Union's support is removed.

High return on investment

The project will provide great cost-efficiency and impact. Project promotion and preselection of candidates will take into account not only individual profiles but also the project ideas they wish to explore, ensuring a good return on investment, in terms of time and pay by their employers.

Depending on the available budget, up to several hundred 'rising stars' and media organisations could be connected. The project will not cover participants' pay, but only mobility costs and related training courses (in addition to promotion, selection, administration). Therefore, the cost per participant is strictly controlled, ensuring real results and a good multiplier effect. Based on the initiators' experience, many more applications will be received than places available. Therefore, selection will be strict, providing a boost to participants' careers and a good 'brand'.

Remarks

This appropriation is intended to continue the preparatory action for a second year in addition to covering commitments remaining to be settled from previous years under the preparatory action.

New technologies are dramatically and constantly changing the dynamics of opinion-making and the media landscape. While they allow easy distribution of information of public interest to wider audiences, fostering pluralism, the way in which information is created, searched for and distributed online may accentuate polarisation, exposing individuals to news, sources and ideas that match their stated preferences. This can significantly reduce the scope for encountering and debating opposing viewpoints and, as such, may pose a risk to media pluralism and democracy itself. As the impact of online information is growing, citizens are increasingly forming their opinions though information distributed online. This poses severe risks to effective pluralism when that information is false or is 'misinformation' or 'disinformation'. While some policy responses to proliferation of misinformation call on online intermediaries and social media platforms to adopt self-regulatory measures to limit the circulation of false and fake information, it is evident that entrusting those private companies with filtering information online may lead to a limiting of freedom of expression too.

This preparatory action will support the development of a study on a set of indicators to measure the risks to media pluralism in the online environment. The Union has already invested resources in devising a media pluralism monitor that can assess risks to media pluralism and freedom. This comprehensive tool has proved effective and useful for assessing risks to media pluralism at country level. It is of the utmost importance that the methodology of that tool should be reusable for a new monitor that fully takes into account the online dimension of pluralism. The preparatory action will map the threats to information pluralism online, create a tool to assess the risks to pluralism online and test it in the 28 Member States.

Remarks

With the deterioration of press and media freedom in Member States and candidate countries, in what is a worrying trend, a Europe-wide rapid response mechanism for violations of media freedom will provide tangible protection for journalists and will extend to fact-finding, advocacy, monitoring, informing the European public and awareness raising.

Under the Charter of Fundamental Rights, everyone has the right to freedom of expression. Recent developments show that this value needs to be strongly defended so as to protect democracy, strengthen public discourse and guarantee an enabling environment for investigative and independent journalists. Hence, it is crucial to set up a Europe-wide response mechanism for violations of press and media freedom.

This pilot project will enable the establishment of a Europe-wide rapid response mechanism to make violations visible, and to provide practical help to journalists under threat, in collaboration with European, regional and local stakeholders in the field of media freedom. Practical help must encompass tools to protect journalists under threat, providing direct advice and legal support as well as offering shelter and assistance so that they can continue to pursue their profession. Representatives will be sent to countries affected and anti-impunity action will be supported through advocacy. Monitoring of the situation will provides reliable and comprehensive information for the public as well as European authorities. This promotes awareness-raising and allows early warnings to be issued. Instruments will be adjusted to accommodate individual needs on a case-by-case basis. The unique toolkit forming part of the rapid response mechanism will prevent further violations and will improve press and media freedom, while also providing journalists under threat with advice, legal support and/or shelter.

The pilot project will also operate as an early warning system for the European Parliament.

Remarks

This preparatory action will build on the 'European research grants for journalistic investigations, #IJ4EU' project. Maintaining quality journalism and especially investigative journalism, which is a particularly resource-intensive genre, has become more difficult in the changing media landscape. The preparatory action will strengthen the European public sphere and help create a European public discourse. In this context, the Commission will issue an open call for proposals for an independent body to implement consecutive rounds of grants supporting journalistic investigations involving journalists from at least two Member States so as to ensure maximum independence and journalistic freedom. Results will be published in at least the Member States involved.

The murders of Daphne Caruana and Ján Kuciak show that the work of investigative journalists is becoming increasingly difficult and that in the current political context, and amid the changing media landscape, not only political and legal support, but also continued financial support from the Union is essential.

Remarks

While digital services have been increasingly developed and deployed by public administrations, their accessing and using them are still uneven both across and within countries in Europe. One reason for that is the limited scope of one-stop-shop platforms that are sufficiently user-friendly for citizens and business.

Distributed ledger technologies (DLTs) can provide a response to this challenge by supporting the integration of different services, ranging from identity and document exchange management to processing information flows and ensuring maintenance of repositories and registries.

DLTs can do that without the need for a central validation function and in a secure mode, which shortens processing time, encourages process automation and reduces the scope for errors and fraud. In addition, information can be securely processed in compliance with the principles set out in Regulation (EU) 2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Directive 95/46/EC (General Data Protection Regulation) (OJ L 119, 4.5.2016, p. 1) and on the basis of privacy-by-design computation processes.

While DLTs are being increasingly adopted in different domains, take-up of them in public administration is lagging behind because of the relative immaturity of the technology solutions and a lack of experimentation specifically addressing the need to offer service platforms to citizens.

This project will pilot the creation of a small-scale digital public administration platform based on DLTs in order to provide integrated public services to users on the basis of key components such as digital identify management, notarised services and secure document exchange management. The platform will be based on the reuse of open source components supported by collaboration mechanisms with the blockchain community. The pilot will assess the technical feasibility of such a service platform and its usability and performance. It will also assess its potential for reuse across different public administrations in Europe, with a view to creating the basis for a blockchain-based European public administration infrastructure.

Remarks

These remarks are applicable to all the budget lines in this chapter.

This appropriation will be used for Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation, which covers the 2014-2020 period, and for the completion of the previous research programmes (Seventh Framework Programme and preceding framework programmes) and previous information and communication technologies programmes (ICT PSP (2007-2013) and programmes prior to 2007).

Horizon 2020 shall play a central role in the implementation of the Europe 2020 flagship initiative 'Innovation Union' and other flagship initiatives, notably 'Resource-efficient Europe', 'An industrial policy for the globalisation era', and 'Digital Agenda for Europe', as well as in the development and functioning of the European Research Area. Horizon 2020 shall contribute to building an economy based on knowledge and innovation across the whole Union by leveraging sufficient additional research, development and innovation funding.

It will be carried out in order to pursue the general objectives set out in Article 179 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, in order to contribute to the creation of a society of knowledge, based on the European Research Area, i.e. supporting transnational cooperation at all levels throughout the Union, taking the dynamism, creativity and the excellence of European research to the limits of knowledge, strengthening human resources for research and for technology in Europe, quantitatively and qualitatively, and research and innovation capacities in the whole of the Union and ensuring optimum use thereof.

CHAPTER 09 04 — HORIZON 2020 (cont'd)

In Horizon 2020, gender equality is addressed as a cross-cutting issue in order to rectify imbalances between women and men and to integrate a gender dimension in research and innovation content. Particular account will be taken of the need to step up efforts to enhance the participation at all levels, including decision making, of women in research and innovation.

Also entered against these articles and items are the costs of high-level scientific and technological meetings, conferences, workshops and seminars of European interest organised by the Commission, the funding of high-level scientific and technological analyses and evaluations carried out on behalf of the Union to investigate new areas of research suitable for Union action, inter alia, in the context of the European Research Area, and measures to monitor and disseminate the results of the programmes, including measures under previous framework programmes.

This appropriation will be used in accordance with Regulation (EU) No 1290/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2013 laying down the rules for the participation and dissemination in 'Horizon 2020 — the Framework Programme for Research and Innovation (2014-2020)' and repealing Regulation (EC) No 1906/2006 (OJ L 347, 20.12.2013, p. 81).

The contributions from the EFTA States pursuant to the Agreement on the European Economic Area, and in particular Article 82 thereof and Protocol 32 thereto, must be added to the appropriations entered in this chapter. By way of information, these amounts derive from contributions from the EFTA States entered against Article 6 3 0 of the statement of revenue, which constitute assigned revenue in accordance with points (b), (e) and (f) of Article 21(2) of the Financial Regulation; they give rise to the provision of corresponding appropriations and to implementation under the 'European Economic Area' Annex to this part of the statement of expenditure in this section, which forms an integral part of the general budget.

Administrative appropriations of this chapter will be provided under Article 09 01 05.

09 04 01 Excellent science

Remarks

The specific objective is to foster radically new technologies by exploring novel and high-risk ideas building on scientific foundations. By providing flexible support to goal-oriented and interdisciplinary collaborative research on various scales and by adopting innovative research practices, the aim is to identify and seize opportunities of long-term benefit for citizens, the economy and society.

Activities under the 'Future and Emerging Technologies' specific objective shall address the entire spectrum of science-driven innovation: from bottom-up, small-scale early explorations of embryonic and fragile ideas to building new research and innovation communities around transformative emerging research areas and large and federated research initiatives built around a research agenda aiming to achieve ambitious and visionary goals.

Activities cover collaboration, networking actions and national programme coordination initiatives. The vision of the eHealth action plan 2012-2020 is to utilise and develop e-health to address several of the most pressing health and health systems challenges of the first half of the twenty-first century, namely:

— to improve chronic disease and multi-morbidity (multiple concurrent disease) management and to strengthen effective prevention and health promotion practices,

— to increase the sustainability and efficiency of health systems by unlocking innovation, enhancing patient-/citizen-centric care and citizen empowerment and encouraging organisational changes,

— to foster cross-border healthcare, health security, solidarity, universality and equity,

— to improve legal and market conditions for developing e-Health products and services.

ICT-based products and services have demonstrated their capacity to help address these major challenges in the form of personalised health, telehealth and telecare solutions, service robotics for health and care, support for prolonged active and independent living and home-based care. It is also a major new growth opportunity as large new markets for ICT-based products and services emerge to address health, demographic change and well-being.

Activities will cover development and exploitation of ICT for health, well-being and 'ageing well' solutions. This will build on the emergence of underpinning technologies arising out of ICT in LEIT such as micro-nano systems, embedded systems, robotics, internet of the future and cloud technologies. It will also build on further development of security- and privacy-enhancing technologies.

The ambient assisted living research and development joint programme will also be supported to contribute to market availability and exploitation of ICT-based products and services and the ICT innovation and pilot projects will be further supported in response to the European Innovation Partnership on Active and Healthy Ageing and the eHealth 2020 action plan.

Activities will cover collaboration, networking actions and national programme coordination initiatives. Also entered in this item are the costs of independent experts assisting in proposal evaluations and project reviews, the costs of events, meetings, conferences, workshops and seminars of European interest organised by the Commission, the costs of studies, analyses and evaluations, the costs of monitoring and evaluation of the specific programme and of the framework programmes and the costs of measures to monitor and disseminate the results of the programmes, including measures under previous framework programmes.

Remarks

The specific objective is to foster inclusive, innovative and reflective European societies in a context of unprecedented transformations and growing global interdependencies.

Activities will cover four main areas: ICT-enabled public sector innovation, understanding and preserving Europe's intellectual basis and cultural heritage, learning and inclusion.

ICT-enabled public sector innovation refers to the use of ICT for the creation and implementation of new processes, products, services and methods of delivery which result in significant improvements in the efficiency, effectiveness and quality of public services. The future public administrations should be digital and cross-border by default. Activities will cover fostering efficient, open and citizen-centric public services, involving the public sector as an agent for innovation and change as well as cross-border innovation measures or seamless delivery of public services.

The aim of the second challenge is 'to contribute to an understanding of Europe's intellectual basis and cultural heritage: its history and the many European and non-European influences; as an inspiration for our lives today', as well as to facilitate the access and exploitation of this cultural heritage.

The aim of the third challenge is to support the widespread adoption of ICT in schools and for training in Europe.

The fourth challenge is to get the elderly (aged 65 and above), the unemployed and low-educated persons, migrants, people in need of care, people living in remote or poorer areas, persons with disabilities, and the homeless people to fully participate in society. Activities will focus on empowering them with the necessary digital skills and providing them with access to digital technologies. Activities aiming at fostering a better consideration for inclusiveness and responsibility aspects in ICT-related innovations will also be supported.

Activities will cover collaboration, networking actions and national programme coordination initiatives. Also entered in this item are the costs of independent experts assisting in project reviews, the costs of events, meetings, conferences, workshops and seminars of European interest organised by the Commission, the costs of studies, analyses and evaluations, the costs of monitoring and evaluation of the specific programme and of the framework programmes and the costs of measures to monitor and disseminate the results of the programmes, including measures under previous framework programmes.

Part of the support of the Union to the COST intergovernmental framework for transnational cooperation among researchers, engineers and scholars across Europe will also be covered from this appropriation.

Remarks

The specific objective is to foster secure societies, contributing to the protection of freedom and security of the Union and its citizens.

The integrated portfolio of activities will develop solutions to protect our society and economy against accidental or man-made disruptions of the information and communication technologies our society and economy depends on; providing solutions for end-to-end secure ICT systems, services and applications; safeguarding the human right of privacy in the digital society; providing the incentives for the industry to supply secure ICT; stimulating the uptake of secure ICT.

The aim is to ensure cyber security, trust and privacy in the digital single market, whilst at the same time improving the competitiveness of the Union's security, ICT and service industries. Another objective is to increase users' trust in their participation in the digital society and overcome citizens' concern with the disclosure of their personal information online because of security issues (e.g. internet usage for banking or purchases).
